Everyone has a calling in life, a purpose that they are meant to fulfill. They may feel a strong passion, a sense of mission, or a deep connection to a certain field or activity. However, not everyone follows their calling right away. Sometimes, they may face obstacles, doubts, or fears that prevent them from pursuing their true path. But what happens when they ignore their calling?

Ignoring your calling has negative consequences for your well-being and happiness. You will feel restless, dissatisfied, or unfulfilled in your current situation. You may experience a loss of meaning, direction, or joy in your life. You may also suffer from stress, anxiety, or depression as a result of living out of alignment with your true self.

Answering the call that God has on your life will bring you many benefits. You will feel more engaged, motivated, and inspired by your work. You will discover new talents, skills, or opportunities that you never knew existed. You will also contribute to the work of God in a positive and meaningful way.

If you feel that you have a calling in life, do not ignore it. It will just keep calling you until you answer it. Listen to your intuition, follow your heart, and take action. You will find that it is the best decision you ever made. †

National Youth Congress

It was such a blessing to attend the ALJC National Youth Congress (NYC). We are "All In" and want to be "Known of God"!
