SANDBOX STORY 5 INVITES NEW YORKERS TO STEP INTO THE UNKNOWN

Five objects. Five storytellers. One completely unpredictable night.

NEW YORK, NY — August 24, 2026 — What happens when you put five random objects in front of five people and ask them to tell a story?

Nobody knows.

That is the point.

On Saturday, September 5 at 9:30 PM, artist, speaker, and Wonderist Gyll Star brings Sandbox Story 5 to The PIT in Manhattan for an interactive theater experience built around curiosity, imagination, and audience participation.

There is no script. There is no predetermined ending. There are five objects. Five audience volunteers become storytellers, each choosing an object from Gyll Star's Wonder-ful Bag and using it as the starting point for an entirely unexpected story. The audience becomes part of the journey as the stories unfold in real time.

"I'm interested in what happens when we stop trying to know what comes next," says Star.

"Sandbox Story 5 gives people permission to play, make things up, change direction, and see what happens."

The experience is designed for people who don't necessarily think of themselves as performers.

You don't have to be an improviser.

You don't have to be creative.

You don't have to prepare anything.

Come as you are.

Sandbox Story 5 grew out of Star's larger body of work exploring wonder, curiosity, human connection, and what happens when people reconnect with parts of themselves they may have set aside while navigating adult life.

Rather than asking audiences to sit back and watch a performance, Star invites them to participate in creating it.
