THE CINDER MAID

A Classic English Version

The Story

One of the earliest English versions of Cinderella is called "The Cinder Maid". It was first written down in the 17th century by the English writer Robert Dodsley.

In this version, the kind heroine is mistreated, but with the help of magic she goes to the ball and wins the prince — just like the story we know and love.

YE XIAN

The Chinese Cinderella

The Story

"Ye Xian" is one of the oldest Cinderella stories. It comes from China and was first written down over 1,000 years ago. In this version, the kind heroine is helped by a magical fish, not a fairy godmother. After the fish is killed, its magical bones help her to go to the festival, where she catches the attention of the prince.

The Story

Surya Bai is a much-loved Indian folktale that is sometimes compared with Cinderella. In this story, a kind and gentle girl faces hardship and is treated unfairly by her family. With the help of magical events and a little bit of luck, her life begins to change. She is recognised for her kindness and good heart, and her fortunes are transformed.

The story teaches us that kindness, bravery and patience can lead to a brighter tomorrow — just like in Cinderella stories around the world.

The Story

"Yeleen" is a traditional Cinderella story from West Africa, particularly the Bambara people of Mali. In this version, Yeleen is a kind and hardworking girl who is mistreated by her stepmother and stepsisters. With the help of a magical fish (sometimes a golden fish), she receives beautiful clothes to attend a great celebration. When it is time to leave, she drops a special item — often a bracelet, ring or slipper — which helps the prince find her. Yeleen's kindness, patience and courage lead to a happy ending.

CONKIAJGHARUNA

The Little Rag Girl

A Georgian Cinderella Tale

The Story

Conkiajgharuna is a traditional Georgian Cinderella tale. A kind girl is badly treated by her stepmother, but she is helped by a magical cow. Before the cow dies, it gives her instructions. Following its wishes, Conkiajgharuna receives beautiful clothes and a horse. She goes to church, and while hurrying home, she loses a golden slipper in a stream. The king's horses notice the shining slipper, it is recovered, and the king searches for its owner. The slipper fits Conkiajgharuna, and her kindness is finally recognised.
