President's Message

Wishing everyone a happy and a healthy Rosh Hashanah and an easy fast for Yom Kippur.

Congratulations to the Mandler's, who had a Pidyon Haben for their new son at the synagogue. At the same time they had a Pidyon Haben for the father and grandfather who had not had one. To the best of my knowledge this was the first Pidyon Haben in the history of the shul.

Congratulations to Fay Lonstein on the birth of her great grandson.

Congratulations to the Levin's and Zur's, and the rest of the extended family on Aviel's bar mitzvah. He read the torah on Monday and then did the haftorah on Saturday.

Congratulations to the Ferstenberg's on the birth of a grandson, to Alex and Aiden.

We wish a speedy rehabilitation for Carol Aronoff.

We have started to have some kiddushes, when there is a sponsor. If you would like to sponsor a kiddush, please let the Rebbetzin know so you can reserve a date.

 President

VIEW FROM THE BIMAH

BH

Rosh Hashana, literally, means the head of the year.

More than a cute way of describing the beginning, the word Rosh – the head – is deliberate and specific; just as the head holds the life force for the entire body and distributes the appropriate measure and design to each part – for the eye to see, the ear to hear, etc. – so too, the first day of the year holds all the energy that it later dispenses to all the days of the year. Rosh Hashana is the day Al-mighty G-d renews His lease with the world and supplies all the necessary components for the upcoming year.

Now, we know that G-d is complete and lacks nothing. Why would He choose to create a world and place on it human beings (and supportive actors), doesn't the whole exercise seem unnecessary?

The short answer is, according to the Midrash, Nitaveh – G-d had a desire to have a home in the realms below. It wasn't satisfactory that He be whole and complete; G-d also wanted there to be a world with human beings who experience their own independence. When these beings choose, with their own free will, to have a relationship with G-d, this brings Him satisfaction.

In other words, the entire human experiment is contingent upon G-d still being interested and maintaining His part of the deal. Being that this is up for renegotiation on Rosh Hashana, it is crucial for the sustainability the world's existence that G-d remains committed.

But there are no guarantees. It is conceivable that G-d would lose interest and refuse to renew the arrangement (and to be perfectly honest, observing the atrocities committed by human beings, who can blame Him?)

However, our tradition tells us that there's one tool that conveys to G-d our innermost desire to have a relationship with Him, and that is the Shofar. When G-d hears the sound of the Shofar blown on Rosh Hashana, this elicits within Him the will to reciprocate and have a relationship with us. And, of course, in order to have that, He needs a world, and all its supporting actors.

So, my friends, this in a nutshell is the meaning behind the Shofar, and the reason it's so important to make sure to hear its blasts on Rosh Hashana. There is no better way for us to express our willingness to partner with G-d in His Creator-creation dynamic than this.

In addition to the regular Shofar services at Shul, we will also have an outdoor Shofar service in front of Young Israel on both days of Rosh Hashana at 6:30 PM.

May you and yours be inscribed and sealed in the Book of Life for a good and sweet New Year!

Young Israel Renovation Update

Proposed seating diagram

Young Israel of Lawrenceville has been excitedly making plans for an indoor renovation of our Shul. A beautiful brochure has been sent out – if you have not yet received one, please call the Shul and we will mail one to you. Thanks to all those who have participated so far with small and large donations, we are well underway for a successful campaign, and have reached close to 50% of our fundraising goal. We've also secured a reputable architect and an experienced and recommended builder to begin the work, please G-d, in November. Thanks to the generosity of so many friends and community members we have reached this far, but more funds are needed. Please be in touch with any of the YI board members or myself if you would like to participate in this great project that will benefit the future of our community for many years to come. Thank you!

In New Jersey, Three Generations of Firstborns ‘Redeemed’

“Pidyon haben” ceremony turned out to be a multi-generational affair

By Mendel Super, July 11, 2021 2:54 PM

Newborn Zev Mordechai Mandler, center, with his father, Michael Mandler and (at right) grandfather Raul Mandler, who all took part in “pidyon haben” ceremonies conducted by Rabbi Aryeh Weinstein, left, a kohen, and Rabbi Yitzchak Goldenberg, spiritual leader of the Young Israel of Lawrenceville, N.J., and co-director of Chabad of Lawrenceville.

Michael and Hannah Mandler, proud first-time parents, had another less common mitzvah to do after circumcising their bundle of joy, whom they had named Zev Mordechai.

They had to redeem their firstborn son from a Kohen, in a ceremony known as pidyon haben, or the redemption of the firstborn. Redeem their own son?

The ritual harks back to the time when all firstborns had been designated to serve as kohanim, or priests, in the Holy Temple. After the privilege was bestowed exclusively upon the descendants of Aaron the High Priest, a firstborn male must be symbolically redeemed from a Kohen 31 days following his birth—or any time after, if he hadn’t been redeemed on time.

The Mandlers, new to Lawrenceville, N.J., contacted Rabbi Yitzchak Goldenberg, spiritual leader of the Young Israel of Lawrenceville synagogue and co-director of Chabad of Lawrenceville with his wife, Dina.

“We’d never celebrated a pidyon haben in our community,” Goldenberg tells Chabad.org. In fact, according to Young Israel’s president, Charles Miller, this would be the first in the synagogue’s half-century history.

For Goldenberg, the timing couldn’t have been better. “Our community hadn’t come together since the pandemic, and this presented the perfect opportunity.” Together with the Mandlers, they planned an outdoor, community-wide barbecue to mark the occasion.

The ritual harks back to the time when all firstborns had been designated to serve as kohanim, or priests, in the Holy Temple.

Goldenberg recruited his colleague Rabbi Aryeh Weinstein, adult-education director at Lubavitch of Bucks County, Pa., to serve as the Kohen from whom the baby would be redeemed.

As the day neared, Mandler realized that he, as a first-born male, had never had a pidyon haben himself. “I was raised traditionally,” he explains. “I had a brit, but we never did a pidyon haben.”

Mandler’s family, Argentine émigrés to the United States, settled in Albuquerque, N.M., where they first became acquainted with Chabad at Chabad of New Mexico, led by Rabbi Chaim and Devorah Leah Schumkler.

But it was when he met his wife, Hannah, from an observant New Jersey family that he began to become more familiar with the traditions. “I love my son more than the money,” he chuckles, “of course, I wanted to redeem him!”

Mandler’s father, Raul, wasn’t going to make it to the ceremony, but at the last minute, plans changed, and it turned out he would be attending. That’s when Michael realized there would be a third generation being redeemed that day: Raul, too, was a firstborn son.

On June 2, a warm summer's day, Lawrenceville made history not once, but three times, as three generations of Mandlers were redeemed in an age-old rite, in exchange for five silver coins.

"We'd never celebrated a pidyon haben in our community," Goldenberg tells Chabad.org. In fact, according to Young Israel's president, Charles Miller, this would be the first in the synagogue's half-century history.

"My Israelite wife has borne me this firstborn son," Michael, informed the Kohen, Rabbi Weinstein.

"Which would you rather have—your firstborn son, or the five coins which you are obligated to give me for the redemption of this your firstborn son?" asked Weinstein.

"I want this, my firstborn son," declared Michael (much to his wife Hannah's relief), "and here you have five coins which are required of me for the redemption."

The symbolic exchange carries special meaning to Michael. "It's a choice you make," he muses. "To me, it's about valuing your child more than material possessions. These traditions are so important to carry on; we need to be the spirit of Judaism."

For the rabbi, this rare ceremony reflects the recent growth of the community as a younger demographic joins their vibrant community. From a Sunday morning tefillin club to weekly Shabbat services, the active community is attracting new members in what may be a post-pandemic demographic shift. The Goldenbergs, whose portfolio includes nearby Rider University, now run a "Mommy & Me" program, bringing their reach to all segments of the Jewish community with an emphasis on family-oriented activities.

"Family comes first," Michael adds, "especially when we've lost so much."

You might find the following prayer comforting when lighting a Yahrzeit candle for a loved one....

Prayer on Kindling a Yahrzeit Lamp Eternal Rock of Ages

In hushed reverence, I kindle this memorial lamp in loving remembrance on this anniversary of _____'s death.

We have been taught that human souls are Thy candles.

Through them Thou bringest light into the world. For the light of compassion and tenderness which my loved one brought into my life, I am everlastingly grateful.

Help me, O G-d, to use the sacred memory of my loved one as a noble spur to consecrated living. May I perpetuate and transmit everything that was beautiful and loving about my loved one's character. Keep firm my faith that we cannot go where You are not, and where You are all is well.
Amen.

*As the light is kindled say:
"Zecher tsaddik leevrachah,"*

The memory of the upright is a source of the blessing.

The Yahrzeit candle should be lit at sunset on the evening before the anniversary of your loved one's passing.

Hooray for the Café

Wondering how to fill that empty void you find in your pandemic social schedule? The solution is easy! Be sure to set a calendar reminder for 8 o'clock every Tuesday night to logon to the online Young Israel Café.

Zoom on in and enjoy the camaraderie of your fellow congregants and friends while being entertained by a wide variety of interesting guests.

You get to bring your favorite snack and beverage to enjoy while having the opportunity to help perpetuate our congregational friendships during these otherwise isolating times. Watch for the exciting lineup of guests planned for this fall. As always, suggestions for thought-provoking speakers are always welcome. Perhaps best of all is that the dress code is informal, and you can feel free to invite a friend from anywhere!
