Lee introduces the matter as the Silver Plume Board of Trustees Public Hearing on the Development Plan for Special Review Use of new development at 425 Hancock Street. The development plan was recommended to be approved by the planning and zoning board about 3 weeks ago, and now the Board will review it today. Lee calls for questions and discussion on the matter, and Mark Basham reports that the Planning and Zoning Board had initially had questions regarding the height, during which they thought the height did not comply with TOSP code, but they were using the total overall measurements which included some below grade figures, and finally determined that the height is in fact in compliance and does not pose an issue.

Then

they receive their elevation certificate, and it was noted that this development has no impact on the flood zone. R. McDonald is new as the Town's floodplain Administrator, and reports that he believes the development is all good from the Town's standpoint, although he does advise that the Homeowner Katherine Reckman contacts their insurance company and make sure the floodplain does not affect their insurance coverage.
