Alignable's 2025 Local Business Person of the Year Contest reached record-breaking levels of engagement, with over 333,000 votes, 77,000 recommendations, and 4,750 winners across the U.S. and Canada.

With more than 9 million small business members, Alignable invited its network to recognize business leaders who consistently uplift their peers, offer support, and contribute to the greater good of their local economies—especially during a time marked by ongoing challenges.

"In our local business community, we look out for one another. Whether it's offering strategic advice, making referrals, or providing encouragement, we're committed to rising together," said Holloway. "This award reflects that spirit of unity and the strength of our network. I'm proud to be a part of a community that leads with intention and collaboration."

As a three-time honoree, Holloway continues to stand out for her hands-on leadership, mentorship, and strategic guidance. She received a new badge on her Alignable profile recognizing this latest accolade—an honor that has opened new doors for many past winners.
