

GLORIOSA LILY

Glory lily or climbing lily is actually a relative of the true lily. This beautiful and flashy red with yellow flowers has recurring petals and grows on a vine that can reach 6 feet or more. The end of each lance-shaped leaf tapers to a tendril, which wraps around any handy support as it climbs. This lily is best grown in pots.

LOCATION:

Filtered sun or light shade

PLANT:

Tubers should be planted in a horizontal position, one to a pot, 4" deep, in well drained soil. These can be started indoors and set out after all danger of frost has past.

FLOWERING TIME:

Summer

AFTER CARE:

Withhold water and fertilizer in late September when foliage yellows. After leaves dry, cut stems back and store in a container in a 55-60 degree dry location for the winter, or dig tubers and store like dahlias.
