Marissa's Dog Training LLC

Why choose Marissa's Dog Training LLC? You may be looking around at multiple trainers and trying to choose the best fit for you. Here is how they stick out from other trainers:

- They are certified in dog behavior and service dog training. This means they went to college to learn all about dogs and why they learn/act the way they do. They are always continuing our education with the most up to date techniques.
- They are positive reinforcement ONLY. This means they do not use any negative tools or punishment to harm your dog. It has been proven and debunked that these types of methods do not work and actually do harm your pups way of learning. There are better techniques that are proven to work and help build a positive bond with your pup. This is the most up to date way of training.
- They travel to your home and work with your schedule! The best way to train a dog is to actually train the owner as well. They love teaching kiddos too so they can work with the whole family.
- They offer different payment plans on packages if needed. This helps you get the training help you need with a professional trainer and helps fit into your budget. They also offer discounts multiple times throughout the year!
- They are currently the only board and train facility on the mountains (so far)! They will provide videos of each sessions, give homework assignments and will still require one on one classes with the owner.
- They offer private lessons and go at the pace of your dog! That way our full attention is on you and your specific goals. They never rush sessions so you get exactly what you and your dog needs.
- They offer behavior modification. They are qualified to work with anxious and aggressive dogs. Any breed, any age, any size, they do not discriminate!
- They have over 9 years of experience and have been in business since 2018. They worked at a dog daycare before starting this company to experience as many breeds and ages as possible.

Birch and the Quiet Lessons

A young shepherd named Mara adopted a timid rescue dog named Birch, hoping he might one day help her tend the small flock that grazed along the foothills. At first, Birch flinched at every sound—the rustle of grass, the flap of a bird’s wings, even the soft jingle of his own collar. Mara didn’t rush him. Each morning she sat beside him in the pasture, letting him watch the sheep from a safe distance, her voice steady and warm as she praised even the smallest sign of curiosity.

As the days passed, Birch began to mirror her calm. Mara introduced simple cues—sit, stay, come—always paired with gentle encouragement and a treat tucked between her fingers. When he succeeded, his tail wagged with a pride that seemed new to him. When he hesitated, Mara simply tried again, showing him that mistakes weren’t failures but stepping stones. Slowly, Birch learned to trust not just her commands, but himself.

One crisp evening, a lamb wandered toward the creek, bleating anxiously. Before Mara could react, Birch trotted forward, circling the lamb with surprising confidence and guiding it back to the flock. Mara laughed, tears stinging her eyes, as Birch bounded to her side, chest puffed with triumph. Training had shaped his skills, but patience had shaped his heart—and together, they had become a team neither could have imagined at the start.
