The Principles of Peace and Restoration

Responses to DutyStation Election Reflections

1. What gives you hope heading into this election?

CANDIDATE RESPONSE

My hope comes from seeing more candidates step forward who recognize the need to bring some sanity back to Washington, vote NO on endless foreign wars and foreign aid packages, invest in America first, and bring our troops home. Preserve America's blood and treasure. I'm encouraged by candidates who promise to fulfill our nation's obligation to those who serve and will put that responsibility into action. Building. Healing. Restoration. Dignity. Honor. Fulfilling the nation's obligations to those who serve.

2. In three words, how would you describe your vision for America?

CANDIDATE RESPONSE

Peace. Liberty. Prosperity.

3. What should bring Americans together after Election Day?

CANDIDATE RESPONSE

Our love of country and our shared responsibility to its future. Regardless of who wins, we must come together to serve our communities, recognize those who sacrifice to help others, and continue building a better future for the next generation. Our duty to America doesn't end on Election Day. We should accept the results, focus on what we have in common, not what divides us; focus on what is GOOD, not what is evil.

4. What do you hope the next generation inherits from us?

CANDIDATE RESPONSE

My hope is that the next generation inherits the American spirit of independence, resilience, hard work, ambition, and community service, along with a renewed sense of brotherhood and a strong drive to correct our mistakes and misplaced priorities.

We've squandered our wealth, burdened them with debt, and put endless wars and empire building ahead of Americans. I have faith in their ability and determination to change course—to pursue peace through diplomacy and non-intervention, uphold constitutional liberty, put Americans first, and work together for prosperity.

5. What is your closing message to voters?

CANDIDATE RESPONSE

George Washington said twenty years of peace will transform America and build such a strong economy that we could stand against any power on earth. He also warned us to “steer clear of permanent alliances with any portion of the foreign world.” Listen to those words of wisdom. He ought to know—he’s the father of our country!

That is the foundation of my campaign: In order to have a strong, vibrant economy, we must first have peace: PEACE ABROAD PROTECTS OUR FREEDOM AND STABILITY, AND KEEPS OUR WEALTH AT HOME.

Regardless of this election’s outcome, our "Seniors, Vets, Disabled TASKFORCE" will continue its work. We welcome everyone to join us, share their ideas, and help advocate for legislation and practical policies that support our seniors, veterans, and people with disabilities.
