Half Suite or Full Suite – Which is Best for My Cat?

As guided by Amy

What's the Difference?

Half Suite

A single-level space with a solid door that opens to the catio. It's the perfect secure hideaway.

Full Suite

A two-level space with an upper viewing level and lower level, plus access to the catio.

Half Suite is Best for Shy or Scared Cats

If your cat is shy, anxious or new to boarding, a half suite offers a smaller, quieter space that feels safe and hidden away. It allows them to settle at their own pace with minimal exposure, reducing stress and helping them build confidence over time.

Full Suite is Best for Confident or Active Cats

If your cat is confident, curious or enjoys exploring, a full suite provides more space, vertical enrichment and variety. It encourages natural behaviours like climbing, observing and interactive play, promoting physical and mental wellbeing.

Pereira, C., et al. (2017). Applied Animal Behaviour Science, 187, 54–63.

The Half Suite – the Perfect Spot to Hide Away

The half suite is a cosy, private retreat where cats can hide, rest and feel in control. It's ideal for cats who need minimal stimulus or time to decompress in a safe, predictable environment away from the busier parts of the hotel.

Carney, H. C., et al. (2015). J Feline Med Surg, 17(8), 683–690.

The Full Suite – More Exposure to Daily Hotel Life

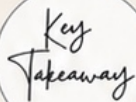

The full suite offers more opportunities to see, hear and smell the daily rhythms of the hotel – while still having the security of their own private space. It's perfect for cats who enjoy watching the world from above and engaging more with their environment.
