

I'm not robot!

Google trademark policy

Google trademark infringement policy. Google trademark guidelines.
Google trademark policy update. Google trademark use guidelines.

Trademarks policy | Trademark help for advertisers Google provides translated versions of our Help Center as a convenience, though they are not meant to change the content of our policies.

The English version is the official language we use to enforce our policies. To view this article in a different language, use the language dropdown at the bottom of the page. Google recognizes the importance of trademarks. The Google Ads Terms and Conditions prohibit intellectual property infringement. Advertisers are solely responsible for the keywords and ad content they use. We take allegations of trademark infringement very seriously and, as a courtesy, we investigate valid trademark complaints submitted by trademark owners or their authorized agents. However, Google is not in a position to mediate third party disputes, and we encourage trademark owners to resolve their disputes directly with advertisers. In addition to directly contacting advertisers, trademark owners who are concerned about trademark use in ads can follow the steps below to submit a complaint. We won't restrict the use of your trademark unless you submit a valid complaint. Trademark owners don’t need to be Google Ads advertisers to submit a complaint. Here are the steps to do so: Verify that you are eligible to submit a complaint. We generally accept complaints from: Trademark owners. Your email address domain must match a corporate domain or website. If you do not have a corporate email address, you will need to provide a PDF of a signed statement on company letterhead confirming that you are an employee of the trademark owner. Attorneys of Record as listed on trademark registrations. Your email address domain must match your or your law firm’s website. For us to accept complaints from any other contacts (such as attorneys not listed on trademark registrations, media agencies, or licensed partners and distributors), trademark owners must provide explicit authorization for these entities to act on their behalf. When submitting the complaint form, you will need to attach either a power of attorney or a signed statement from the trademark owner on their company letterhead that confirms that you are authorized to act on their behalf regarding trademark matters. The authorization should not include conditions such as an expiration date, territorial restrictions, or other limitations. Review the Trademarks policy and make sure that you understand what we will and won’t investigate. Submit the Trademark complaint form. Additional information To ensure efficient review of your complaint, please provide all requested information. We won’t be able to take action on incomplete complaints. Because trademark rights are territorial, we'll only investigate the use of your trademark in regions you specify, where you own active trademark rights. The process to acquire trademark rights, either through registration or use, varies from region to region. Google doesn’t register trademarks. You can choose to request an investigation only of ads by specific advertisers that you identify, or of ads by all relevant advertisers except those that you authorize. After submitting the complaint form, you'll receive an auto-generated confirmation email. After we review your complaint, we'll send a response to the email address you provided letting you know the outcome of our review. We receive a high volume of complaints and review them in the order that they are received. Please be assured that we will contact you after we have reviewed your complaint. If you have questions related to your complaint, reply to the auto-generated confirmation email you received upon submission. Do not resubmit your complaint or follow up in separate emails. If you have a trademark complaint on file, you can authorize advertisers to use your trademark by submitting the authorization form. However, authorization isn't necessary in most scenarios.

Ads may use trademarks in ad text if they meet the Reseller and informational site policy requirements. Please carefully review this policy before submitting the authorization form. Additional information Only the trademark owner or their authorized agent(s) can authorize advertisers to use their trademark.
Authorizations are limited to Google Ads accounts, so you must provide the customer ID of each advertiser that you would like to authorize. Any manager accounts will automatically have authorization extended to all current and future linked accounts. We are unable to accept conditional authorizations that include an expiration date, territorial restrictions, or other limitations. Authorizations apply to all trademarks and variations included in the trademark owner's complaints on file; they cannot be limited to certain trademarks or variations, even if the trademark owner submitted the original complaints separately. You may revoke authorization at any time by submitting the authorization form and noting in the "Clarifications" section of the form that your request is an authorization revocation. Please keep in mind that after we complete a trademark investigation, ads using the trademark in ad text may still be allowed to run if they meet the Reseller and informational site policy requirements.

We believe the right approach is to give users more choices and access to as much information as is relevant to their search or interest. This policy balances the needs of our users while ensuring that noncompliant uses of the trademark in ad text continue to be investigated and restricted according to our Trademarks policy.
We have separate complaint procedures for issues related to counterfeit goods and copyrights. If your complaint relates to counterfeit goods, please review the Counterfeit goods policy and complaint procedure.
If your complaint relates to copyrights, please review the Copyrights policy and complaint procedure. The Google Ads Trademarks policy will be updated on July 24, 2023. Until then, please refer to this page for information about our current Trademarks policy.
You can learn more about our upcoming policy update by reading the Trademarks policy change summary. Google provides translated versions of our Help Center as a convenience, though they are not meant to change the content of our policies.
The English version is the official language we use to enforce our policies.

To view this article in a different language, use the language dropdown at the bottom of the page. For subtitles in your language, turn on YouTube captions.

Select the settings icon at the bottom of the video player, then select "Subtitles/CC" and choose your language. Google abides by local trademark laws and requires that Google Ads ads don’t infringe third party trademarks. We recognize that third parties may properly use trademarks in certain situations, such as by resellers to describe products. If a trademark owner submits a complaint to Google about the use of their trademark in Google Ads ads, we will review it and may enforce certain restrictions on use of the trademark. If you are a trademark owner concerned with the use of your trademark, please review the policy outlined on this page and see the Help for trademark owners page for more information about how to submit a complaint. If you are an advertiser and have questions about how this policy may affect your ads, please visit the Trademark help for advertisers page. Trademarks in search ads In response to trademark owner complaints, we may restrict the use of trademarks in ad text. There are specific requirements for resellers, informational sites, and authorized advertisers who want to use trademarks that would otherwise be restricted. Ads may use the trademark in ad text if they meet the following requirements: Resellers: The ad's landing page is primarily dedicated to selling (or clearly facilitating the sale of) products or services, components, replacement parts, or compatible products or services corresponding to the trademark. The landing page must clearly provide a way to purchase the products or services and display commercial information about them, such as rates or prices. Informational sites: The primary purpose of the ad's landing page is to provide informative details about products or services corresponding to the trademark.
The following is not allowed under the Reseller and informational site policy: Ads referring to the trademark for competitive purposes. Ads with landing pages that require users to provide extensive information before displaying commercial information. Ads that are unclear as to whether the advertiser is a reseller or informational site. Advertisers may use the trademark in ad text if the trademark owner has authorized them. If you are a trademark owner and would like to authorize an advertiser, please see the Help for trademark owners page. If you are an advertiser seeking authorization, please follow the instructions on the Trademark help for advertisers page. The following types of ads may use the term in ad text: Ads using the term descriptively in its ordinary meaning rather than in reference to the trademark. Ads referring to goods or services that do not correspond to the trademark. For certain ad assets and formats only, ads may use a trademark in ad text when referring to the trademark to provide additional information about the advertised products or services. We don’t investigate or restrict trademarks as keywords. For ad campaigns targeting the European Union and European Free Trade Association regions, the policy for trademarks in ad text and keywords applies. However, in response to a valid complaint in these regions, we will conduct a limited investigation as to whether a combination of keyword and ad featuring a trademark is confusing as to the origin of the advertised goods and services. If we find that the combination of keyword and ad is confusing, we will disapprove it. The following types of ads targeting the EU and EFTA regions may use the trademark as a keyword, provided that the combination of the keyword and ad is not confusing. These are examples, and not an exhaustive list: Ads using a term descriptively or generically rather than in reference to the trademark. Ads for competing products or services. Ads for the sale of products or services, replacement parts, or compatible products or services corresponding to the trademark. Ads for sites that provide informative details about products or services corresponding to the trademark. For certain ad assets and formats only: Ads referring to the trademark to provide additional information about the advertised products or services. In response to trademark owner complaints, we may restrict trademarks from appearing in the subdomains of display URLs. We don’t investigate or restrict trademarks in the second-level domains or post-domain paths of display URLs. In response to trademark owner complaints, we may restrict a trademark from appearing in business assets such as business names and business logos. Trademarks in other types of ads Google may remove specific ads on the Google Network in response to trademark owner complaints. Trademarks in ad disclosures In response to a complaint, we may restrict a trademark from appearing within the ‘Advertiser Name’ in ad disclosures, and show an advertiser’s payments profile name instead. This includes ‘About the Advertiser’ disclosures.

