INTRODUCTION

After I graduated high school I disappeared into the bureaucratic abyss of the U.S. government. I was a military linguist, then a Fusion Analyst (FA) and then I was an Air Traffic Controller (ATC). I had nearly 40 years experience in all forms and levels of the federal government. I was military and then became a civilian employee. In the whole of government, I was a mid-level manager or O-6 (military) or GS-15 (civilian) equivalent.

I'll bet you've never heard of a Fusion Analyst. FAs work in the 'think tank' of the federal government. They analyze all forms of information and then organize it into a 'picture' of what's happening. You have access to communication and information at the highest level. Nothing is too classified. No technology is too secret. You fuse all sources of information, public and private (classified), into a picture of whatever it is you are analyzing. It's your little world, project or 'target.' No one knows more about your 'target' than you, not even your target itself. Some might say, colloquially, that I was "a spy."

The level of security was the type that when President Reagan visited, his security detail waited 'outside.' They could come into the building but they wouldn't come into the office because they didn't have "a need to know."

FAs are sort of like Radar O'Reilly on the TV show MASH. They are low in rank but inordinately wise with knowledge and resources. They are brainiacs. My New England friends might say they are "wicked smaht."

The psychological impact of the job is that you develop a very different outlook on life. What is real and what isn't. What is relevant and what's a distraction. Your perception of events is different so your perspective of the world is different. You look and listen through the smoke and mirrors and the "white noise" or fog of communication and information. You think and process information conceptually.

Most people that meet me quickly realize three things: 1. I don't take anything too seriously, 2. I don't take anything seriously, and 3. I'm somehow, different.

It's all true.

LIFE AND GOVERNANCE

Black Ops, PsyOps, Spy Satellites, Secret Planes, every single one of those things exist. They all have a purpose, a time and a place. But just because a technology or a program exists, doesn't mean that it's widely used. It is reserved for the time and place that it's appropriate. The government can do just about anything that you can think of but, the reality is, they won't. Those technologies are only used when absolutely necessary. You'll only encounter it if you're a very, very bad person.

I started to write a book about UFOs. I know quite a bit on the subject and I can debunk just about any report I've ever seen in the media. I have literally taken reports and investigated reports for the FAA. I've seen a lot, and I can explain everything I've ever investigated. Everything I've seen footage of in the media is normal aviation. I have never seen any footage that I can't explain. From the Navy's own cockpit cams to President Reagan's UFO experience in California back in 1974. All of it is easily explained and most of it is just military craft.

Then governor Reagan and his flight crew witnessed a "UFO" over the San Joaquin Valley in California in 1974. They reported a flying orb that expanded while it accelerated and moved at rapid speeds. The UFO was simply an afterburner equipped jet flying at night. Easily explained by someone in the know, they just didn't talk to the right people. They probably asked air traffic control. In this case, not the right people.

Navy Cockpit cam recordings are similar normal events. A pilot sees something unfamiliar and records it. There's something there, it's on video for goodness sake. Yes, but it was classified and it was of no significance to the fighter that filmed it and therefore it was not made known to his military chain of command. It's that simple. It was peculiar activity that the fighter pilot happened to notice but it was just a different flying mission. It was interesting perhaps, but it was inconsequential to that fighter pilot. Interesting perhaps, but that's it. It was just another flying craft. Nothing more, nothing less. This is a classic case of "need to know." Regardless of the security clearance of the pilots or their chain of command, the activity did not concern them and therefore they did not have a 'need to know.' This happens every day in the skies around the world. it's just normal aviation.

ATC divides the sky up into areas. These particular areas are considered 'Special Use Airspace.' Aviation charts depict these segments of the sky so that pilots have a relative understanding of their location in proximity to other activity. In other words, it lets them know something is going on in that area, but they never know "what" is going on.

The problem obtaining information from the government is that their communication and information is designed to be safeguarded or kept private. Some information is classified, most is 'close hold,' all of it is 'controlled.' The system is designed to conceal, not reveal, information.

Even within the government, it's hard to get accurate information because everything is compartmentalized and controlled. Information is separated into parts or groups to protect the bigger picture or meaning. It's the very cornerstone of the classification system and it permeates throughout the government. This isn't exclusive to the United States, this is how government and industry handles information and communication worldwide.

I'm no longer "in the biz" and this story doesn't use any classified information. This story is what analysts would call, open source, raw intelligence. It is a story that is derived from publicly available information that is constructed into a timeline with plausible outcomes. It is by definition, a true story but there is no 'classified' information 'fused' into it.

THE 3600 YEAR CYCLE OF TERRESTRIAL LIFE ON THE EARTH

Landmasses and oceans have two different life cycles on Earth. Oceanic life is shielded from the perils associated with surface, terrestrial life. Terrestrial (land) life appears to have a roughly 3600 year lifecycle with a few exceptions. Man is one of those exceptions. That's because every 3600 years, humans go underground for a brief period, probably decades, then they emerge back onto the surface to start life all over again.

Most cultures and legends reflect that their ancestors emerged from within the Earth. They emerged because there was some type of catastrophic event on the planet that drove them under ground. They were helped by underground species who taught them survival techniques. This advanced culture pre-dates man. Some of these same underground beings have contacted surface humans to express their thoughts on human development. Some of these meetings were reportedly attended by President Eisenhower on more than one occasion. The Hopi referred to these beings as "Ant People." These "Ant People" still exist, just like we do. People have met with them. Some of these beings taught humans how to survive so it is nearly inconceivable that they themselves, would no longer exist.

In the western hemisphere, man emerged thousands of years ago from the four corners area in the Southwestern U.S. In the middle east, people emerged from the caves from Turkey to Iraq. Entire civilizations are known to have existed underground. The Cave of the Patriarchs is one of the most famous caves in the middle east. It is thought to be a passage to the underworld. The middle east is littered with caves. Most of these caves are partially collapsed and inaccessible. Some are guarded to prevent entry. The underground city of Darinkuyu, in Turkey housed as many as 20,000 people in its day. All of these caves seem to have one thing in common, they were dwellings. These weren't just bunkers, they were underground communities. They housed people for extended periods of time. Not because of flooding or drought, but because something on the surface of the Earth made them seek shelter under ground. Someone apparently told them something bad was going to happen and they prepared by building shelters underground. These caves housed civilizations for probably decades before man emerged and resumed surface life.

This appears to be happening right now but it is being done in secrecy, in private. Very few people know the extent of it. Reports of regional "humming" or noise reports and 'swarm earthquakes' could be the source of subsurface preparation. While much of the boring goes unnoticed, it's quite probable that in different geographic areas the composition of the earth makes small quakes and surface noise more prevalent and noticeable.

Almost nothing terrestrial survives the 3600 year life cycle. Nothing on Earth that is man-made. Stone temples, pure metals and precious stones, seem to be the only things that survive the cycle. Look around you, nothing man made seems to be older than 3600 years. Isn't that odd. 3600 hundred years is a millisecond in celestial time, it isn't even a hiccup, yet here we are. Every 3600 years something happens. Some 'thing' or force purges life on Earth and reduces it to a minimalist state. Except for stone and certain metals, it seems to wipe the surface of the Earth clean. It is the end of life on Earth as we know it. Then, after a period, the Earth cools and life springs from the ground and begins all over again. It's the cycle of terrestrial life on Earth. This concept predates the forming of all religion. It's a scientific analysis and theory, not a religious perspective. This cycle, disturbingly, could be as close as five years away.

The only thing older than 3600 years old are fossils, oceanic animals, some amphibians but no trace of life 'on' Earth other than in archeological digs. Weird huh? Well, I think I know why.

No one knows when this 3600 year cycle starts or ends because no records survive. The Sumerian Tablets are the oldest manmade communication or records on Earth. The tablets probably hold the key to the what the date is but some of them are missing, and probably for good reason. Can you imagine a world if everyone knew the end-date? That in itself would be chaos. I suspect that the date could be as early as 2029. Far fetched? No. Plausible? Absolutely, and here's why.

There is a celestial event that seems to share a 3600 year cycle. It's the passing of an asteroid or some other celestial force that seems to disrupt life on Earth. In 2029 the Asteroid Apophis will pass in extremely close proximity to Earth. It is projected to miss us by 20,000 miles on April 13, 2029. A cosmic near-miss. It is a small asteroid, just 1200 feet wide. The Egyptians considered Apophis the embodiment of chaos, destruction, and darkness.

Fun fact: April 13, 2029 is on a Friday. Friday the 13th.

Apophis will be at its closest point to Earth in 2029. Much attention will be paid to it 'missing' the Earth. This is a distraction. The legends and lore about Apophis should not be discarded as fantasy. Those legends grew from a seed of truth. Something associated with Apophis's arrival brings chaos and destruction to the world. The devastation is so catastrophic that our ancestors depicted these events in artifacts so future generations would be warned. If that doesn't get your attention, stop reading. If you are still reading, I'll call this force "Planet Z."

According to the Romans, Apophis was the polar opposite of order. The Egyptians called it chaos and the depicted it as a serpent. That depiction clearly indicates that something will emerge or appear around the time of the Apophis Asteroid or a Planet Z. This force seems to coincide with Apophis but that doesn't mean something is 'with' Apophis.

Evidence indicates that real, no kidding, organic beasts or creatures will appear. These beasts are not riding on an asteroid, they are literally inside the Earth and will rise up. It will be like the '3600 year cicadas.' These are life forms that we cannot prevail over. They are likely above humans in the food chain. These "serpents" sounds like it could be a colossal den of snakes. That matches the description that an 'Alien' told Admiral Richard Byrd in 1947 - "...there is a great storm gathering in your world, a black fury that will not spend itself for many years...."

Picture a snake den. Now picture a serpent den, a den the size of Arizona with huge serpents. A den that wakes up and rises to the surface like snakes emerging from their den. I think this is just one of a number of scenarios that will unfold. Legends say this is probable. It has happened before, why wouldn't it happen again? These creatures did exist and some likely still do exist. Their existence is passed on in carvings and drawings. They are depicted in artifacts and stories. These weren't dreamed up, they were based in reality and it was so apocalyptically catastrophic that our ancestors documented it for us. The problem is that since it happens every 3600 years, it's treated as fanciful or fictional. That's because our perception is based on human lifespans and attention spans. We're preconditioned for short term (lifespan) memory so we don't think of things in the long term with respect to what is possible and what is probable. We make assumptions based on our beliefs and observations, and that is extremely narrow, short term thinking.

Look at the different lifespans of all the species that we know of on Earth. The lifespans (times) are vastly different. The cicada spends 17 years underground, undetected but protected from the elements only to emerge and gorge every 17 years? And there's probably a lot more to it than a 3600 year cicada. Those are probably just the "bugs" of deep inside Earth. There are other species too.

It's important to remember that none of this is associated with religious theology, tradition or belief. The word "rapture" has a religious connotation but everything else is just a matter of fact in the cycle of life on Earth. This sounds like descriptions of a rapture. This is a celestial event, not a religious event. Faith is important because it will help people cope and survive, but religious 'conviction' could limit someone's ability to cope with the calamity. This is not religion, it's just an event, an event in the cycle of life on Earth. It's just a phase and some of us might actually witness it.

The timing of the Apophis Asteroid and the cycle of life on Earth seem to coincide so something is out there. I think it's Planet Z. Something invisible, something powerful, something unknown to man. The interaction with Earth will be both an epoch, and epic event. The force will not destroy the planet but it will literally reshape it.

PLANET Z - A KNOWN BUT UNSEEN FORCE

Hopi Indian legend is that their ancestors sought shelter in a cave by following a strange cloud and star in the sky. Apophis will be clearly visible to the naked eye. The star they saw was likely the Apophis Asteroid and the cloud was probably the result of volcanic activity in the Southwestern U.S. This makes sense since the Southwestern U.S. has a lot of relatively recent (within the past 4000 years) volcanic activity. It all aligns, their legend is supported by fact and science. Anyone that has driven the U.S. Route 395 along the eastern ridge of the Sierra Mountains has driven by miles and miles of “fresh” lava sitting on the Earths surface. These fields are all over the western U.S. The region was alive with volcanic activity just couple thousand years ago. In celestial terms, it was a millisecond ago.

Planet Z is likely the main target of the Hubble and Webb telescopes. Some people refer to this force as PlanetX, Planet 9, the Invisible Planet, Nibiru, there are as many names as there are theories. Maybe it's not a planet or a mass, maybe it is the exact opposite of that. Math and orbital analyses prove that there is something out there effecting orbits. It can't be seen or explained. The math says something is there but all of our technology can't see it. Something is there, but nothing is there. Even if it was a brown star, our technology would see that but it does not.

A small group of astronomers probably already know the ending to this story.

I suspect Planet Z could be anti-matter or the opposite of the 'matter' or mass that we associate with celestial bodies (planets asteroids, comets, etc). This is different. Anti-matter doesn't reflect light, it is invisible. It will cause unknown and unexpected effects because it has never been documented by man. The effect of this energy could be the exact opposite of a large mass with gravity, 'pulling' on Earth. The energy would likely be 'pushing' on the properties of Earth, the opposite of a magnets attraction to metal. Like a magnet 'pushing,' repulsing and repelling Earths properties. Since the Earth is spinning in orbit, the effects will be similar to a 'magnetic pull' but it will be 'pushing up' energy from inside the Earth toward the surface.

Planet Z could be, quite possibly, the harvest moon of evil. I mean that literally and figuratively.

In short, the power from Planet Z will excite the magma within Earth, it will repel, not attract the magma. It will raise the heat and magma from deep within the Earth toward the surface resulting in volcanos. With that increase in temperature, all things that live above the magma layer will rise to the surface of the Earth. It will, for all intents and purposes, be hell on Earth. Whatever lives deep inside the earth will be forced to rise up to escape the forces from below. If you've ever seen ant hills develop in warm spring soil, where the area becomes black with ants, that is what will happen, but on a global scale. They won't be ants, they will be much, much worse.

Imagine this - If all things were equal and a 3600 year cicada grew at the same rate as a 17 year cicada, the 3600 year cicada would be 17 feet tall. Almost like the dragons that are depicted in legends throughout the world. Coincidence? No. Legends are created by seeds of truth. It might sound far fetched but this type of cycle already happens on Earth. Why couldn't it happen on this timeline and scale? Simple, it can.

The shift in magma will cause the magnetic poles to shift inside the Earth. Earth is overdue for a 'polar shift' and is literally undergoing a change right now. Coincidentally, that change is not only occurring, it is accelerating. The difference between magnetic north and "true" or geographic north is expanding every year, and at an accelerated rate. A compass doesn't point to the geographic North Pole, it points to the magnetic North Pole, those places are roughly 1200 miles apart, and that distance is growing. Magnetic forces are like Earth's blood pressure and the Earth has hypertension. When magnetic poles shift, there are untold implications on the earth and technology. It will be cause massive disruptions to the world's infrastructure and atmosphere. Magnetic polar shift is a real thing, and the Earth is overdue for one.

The magma will cause the Earth's surface to heave (quake) along fault lines and tectonic plates. Lands will be reshaped by colossal tidal surges. This celestial event will be apocalyptic. This force will repulse the magma and outer layers of the Earth's crust. This event will be apocalyptic.

The 3600 year cycle is probably what some call “the rapture.” The end of life on Earth and then a new beginning. The end seems to occur with all organic and carbon matter being consumed and deposited back into the Earth. Surface life begins again as the Earth cools and creatures retreat back underground. Man will emerge from their caves (Arks) and start anew. Man will evolve with surviving technology and hopefully we’ll spend the next 3600 years preparing for the next cycle. This is just one cycle of life on Earth.

This cycle is why human races and civilizations seem to disappear but the human species survives. This is why seemingly ‘advanced’ civilizations just disappear from Earth. Some with the 3600 cycle and some separate from it. The ones in between are regionalized, like the Aztecs and Mayans. They disappeared in the middle of this cycle. Well, the same forces can occur on a regional level. Evil things might manifest and then annihilate a civilization. Nothing remains but rock. No one is left, no record is made, it just happens. Well, this happens all the time. People, groups, clusters, all disappear on occasion with no real explanation or record of what happened. They are consumed by a force that seems to disappear as quickly as it appeared. The Indus Civilization is one of the oldest civilizations discovered so far on Earth. They lived in the Indus River Valley in what is now Pakistan. They disappeared roughly 3800 years ago. They were possibly victims of Planet Z.

Certain civilizations disappear ‘out of cycle’ and seem to have no correlation to a celestial event. These are probably species or swarms that cycle to and from the surface in search of energy (food). They rise up, gather their energy, then retreat back to their origin. That's a simple ecological concept that can occur without even a trace. Races disappear without a trace and without explanation. This is fictional, it's historical fact.

The Mayans disappeared 600 years AD, or a scant 1424 years ago. They were 'out of cycle' on the 3600 year cycle. They are an example of a civilization disappearing without a trace and for no apparent reason. The indigenous people in the southwestern U.S. suffered a similar fate. They were likely the victim of an unknown cause or force of extinction. They disappeared without a trace. Science theorizes that these civilizations disappeared because of drought and the regions inability to support life. I think reality was much simpler and much more rapid. It was a purging of life, wiping the region clear.

WORKING INSIDE EARTH

Life inside planet Earth is more complicated than we realize. That's fact, not fantasy. We're standing on the outer surface of a planetary universe we know almost nothing about, while staring into space trying to understand the cosmic universe. Life's bitter sweet irony.

We know very, very little about the composition of Earth. Yes, we study, we dig, we conduct seismic analysis but we know very little. Seismic waves in the ground are like radar in the air. It gives you a rough magnitude or picture of what's there. It is depiction of what you're looking for, not what is actually there. It simply paints a picture to validate your beliefs. Radar and Seismic waves are more or less blind to detail. These technologies have limitations that render them "blind" in many respects. Using radar for an example, it sees airplanes because a radio wave is sent toward the plane and it bounces off, it reflects back at you to tell you something is there. It tells you how far away and how large the object is. The weakness is that if you put something on the other side of that airplane, it's shadowed out, the radar can't see it, you can't see it. It's blocked.

Fun Fact - The FAA and military have been sort of arguing about this for years. The FAA has a program call radar divestiture. The program relies more on signals being sent from an airplane to the ground, not from the ground to the airplane. The military is resisting the elimination of radar technology because it serves a very important purpose. It is independent. It can 'see' things that newer technology can't. Not everything, but it can see birds, weather, flying objects that might not have "equipment" like man is used to. This is, quite simply, a difference of agendas. The FAA seeks efficiency, the military seeks security. This divestiture program balances the FAA and Military agendas. It's a good thing. Again, this is fact, not fiction.

How deep is Earth? Roughly 4000 miles, or 21 million feet. The International Space Station is 250 miles high, the Earth is 4000 miles deep, picture that. We theorize and generalize about Earth's composition but in reality, from an exploratory perspective, we know less than 1% of Earth's make-up.

Of the 21 million feet of depth, man has barely drilled over 40,000 feet, and that was just a borehole in Russia. In reality, many countries are working underground so no one really knows how deep, but 40K is the published 'deepest' man has gone (publicly). You might say that we haven't even scratched the surface. Curiously, look at the time and energy we spend examining space and then consider the lack of knowledge we have about the very planet we're standing on. Weird.

So let's talk Earth exploration. It's not widely publicized or advertised but all countries have an underground construction program of some sort. There's much more down there than just 'big city' subways and 'surface life' infrastructure. The U.S. government takes it a step further. They go deeper and further into the Earth, and for good reason. Security and survival. Digging, tunneling and burying things is the single most effective way to conceal and protect valuable things. Anything that needs preservation for eternity will have one thing in common, it will be entombed in something organic. From the Egyptian Pyramids to the Sumerian Tablets to the Norwegian Seed Vault, everything considered to be of extreme value, is entombed in some form of stone. That's not coincidence.

How do we operate underground? Boring machines. You don't see or hear much about it but our boring technology has evolved along the lines of aviation. The government calls it "transportation excavation." It is how we move very important things from place to place in secret. The existence of the tunnels is not classified, what is classified is the extent and overall structure of the tunnel system. The government protects the secret by compartmentalizing the system into separate parts. Tunnels are built to move important things between regions. The added benefit is that those same tunnels can have additional functions, they can create underground 'Arks' or survival shelters for humanity. Some people call these Deep Underground Military Bases or DUMBS. These bases are probably just shelters, waiting to be activated at the right time. I have never been in one of these so that is just speculation. Facilities do exist but their size and capabilities are unknown to me.

U.S. boring technology and capability really developed along side and because of atomic energy. Los Alamos, New Mexico and the southwestern U.S. were the epicenter of atomic energy so it's no coincidence that the four corners region is the cornerstone of our underground network. A concept in analytics is that trends reveal truths. The four corners region of the United States is no exception to this concept. Many things, from UFOs, to tunnels to extraterrestrial sightings all seem to orbit around the southwestern U.S. Fact, not fiction.

Suffice it to say, the U.S. has a very robust underground network of transportation. While the system was intended to transport weapons, the obvious bonus is that underground real estate is plentiful. Did you know that most real estate transactions in the western U.S. don't include mineral or water rights, no subsurface rights at all below your basement? Fact, not fiction. It's not because you have oil under your house. It's because it's essentially a huge "right of way" for people to operate below the surface with no risk of interference. The land in the west is like the air over your house anywhere else in the country. The government controls it. This is codified in laws. No digging, no mining, no fracking, no activity at all occurs below the surface of the United States without some form of government review or permit. Nothing.

You're probably wondering about the boring machines. You see them on TV and depicted in media. They're big and slow, grinding away underneath the Earth's surface. Well, that's true, sort of. In the 1970s the Department of Energy patented the nuclear subterrene (pronounced like submarine). According to the 1973 cost analysis by Los Alamos Labs, there was really no downside to this technology whatsoever. The machines use fission so there was no chance of a nuclear explosion. The machines melt rock. The by-product (strong glass) is then used to make super strong walls for the tunnel. There is essentially no waste, or surface evidence of the activity. It's not seen, nor heard, nor is there any evidence it exists. It's like a nuclear powered smart worm. No kidding. Fact, not fiction. Remember, that was in the 70s, imagine what they're doing now.

The main tunneling portal in the southwestern U.S. is a flurry with activity. The hangar space for equipment has increased for the past three decades but the last 20 years have really seen an increase in activity. They are busy. Very, very busy. The portal is located far away from prying eyes but is clearly visible if you know what you're looking at. I won't divulge it here because it could be considered "classified" by some but it is clearly visible on publicly available space-based cameras.

The beauty of a tunnel system is also their versatility. If you're able to tunnel between regional areas, then you can make regional access points down into the system. This type of infrastructure would be useful if you ever had to use the system with large volumes of people. Hypothetically, if you used this system to form sort of an "Ark" or housing for large masses of people, it would make the "boarding process" as dynamic as the situation warranted. You hear rumors about the underbelly of Denver Airport being such a place. Well, I HOPE we were that insightful years ago. I think it will be important someday. I don't pray for a lot but I do pray that the generations before us had more insight and vision than the generation I find myself in.

LIVING INSIDE EARTH

Let's get back to the underground beings. Don't take my word for it. Look for yourself. Let's just look at three people that have said there is life down there, then you do some research and you decide.

Admiral John Byrd, CIA pilot John Lear and government contractor Phil Schneider have all reported encounters with beings inside the Earth. Phil and John seem to have primary encounters with and knowledge about the evil ones. Admiral Byrd, thank God, got to experience the good ones. President Eisenhower reportedly met with the good and the bad. Admiral Byrd briefed the Pentagon and President Truman about his experience. All of this sounds sensational, but I assure you, the odds of that group all being linked together with similar stories that align in context is pretty slim. This sounds surreal; fantasy verging on psychosis. It's none of that, it is just Life on the Planet Earth in a different context. A context that you never consider.

Who were these folks? I'll paraphrase and summarize their stories.

Admiral Byrd was a U.S. Navy Admiral dispatched to explore Antarctica after World War II. The Operation was named Operation High-jump, an Antarctic expedition during the Antarctic 'summer' of 1946/47. Long story short, four planes were dispatched to explore the continent. Well, the Admirals plane took a slightly different route. It was late to return, very late. It was three hours late before it reappeared after all the others. Rumors swirled about why and what happened. This film documents that the Admiral's aircraft had a maintenance problem and shut down one engine during the flight. The problem is that flying with one engine would not cause a twin engine aircraft to be delayed three hours. The secret diary discovered after Admirals Byrd death is the likely real story behind the missing timeframe. If it had landed somewhere, that would have been easily explained and described. It wasn't. The three hour timeframe was 'glossed over' by the crash of a different aircraft that included survivors on another part of the continent. The entire journey was remarkable. What's perplexing is that we deployed that amount of time and resources on such a massive expedition immediately after World War II. At a time when the entire world was trying to regain normalcy, the U.S. dispatched the largest floating science expedition in history. Odd.

If you don't watch the video, listen to the military own description of just some of their discovery. They showed and described video of the Antarctic summer. In their own words "they discovered a warm oasis in the shadow of the cold." A massive area estimated to be 300 square miles non-snow covered land with open lakes and streams. They literally landed on one of the bodies of water. Some lakes had a temperature 'inversion' where the deeper water is warmer than the surface water. Deep waters were in excess of 70 degrees Fahrenheit but the surface waters were only 38 degrees. This is not uncommon and it's not unique to Antarctica. It proves that life on the continent is vastly different from common perception.

Antarctica does have a summer. They have volcanic activity, warm waters and vegetation. The landmass is over 1 1/2 times larger than the United States. Antarctica is over nine times larger than the state of Alaska. It's span would stretch from Hudson Bay in Canada to Central America. It is not just a block of ice. Public perception and understanding of the continent is minimal because there is so little public information. Satellite coverage is limited because it is the south pole. Antarctica sounds like it could be the cosmic 'front door' to planet Earth. The Navy's own documented record of the expedition details the continents diversity. It's available on the internet and the footage was developed by the military decades ago. It is the most detailed and informative record of Antarctica that you'll find and it was produced by the government. Don't take my word for it, take theirs.

Admiral Byrd returned to the United States and died in 1957. What's interesting is that his son found his "secret diary" in his belongings after he passed. That diary described the events on the day of his flight. He wrote this secret diary to memorialize his knowledge without violating his promise of secrecy to the government under oath. He wrote it with the hope that someday someone would find it and his knowledge would be shared. He wrote it to educate and he did not write it in vein, you are about to read an excerpt from his diary: This describes his experience being brought to an area inside the Earth for a meeting with an advanced being. This being was referred to as 'The Master' and the description sounds similar to what people describe as a "Nordic" looking 'alien.' I'll use that term because it's an easy form of reference.

This is reportedly from the Admirals notes:

...From this point I write all the following events here from memory. It defies the imagination and would seem all but madness if it had not happened. The radioman and I are taken from the aircraft, and we are received in a most cordial manner. We were then boarded on a small platform-like conveyance with no wheels It moves us toward the glowing city with great swiftness. As we approach, the city seems to be made of a crystal material. Soon we arrive at a large building that is a type I have never seen before. It appears to be right out of the design board of Frank Lloyd Wright, or perhaps more correctly, out of a Buck Rogers setting.

We are given some type of warm beverage which tasted like nothing I have ever savored before. It is delicious. After about ten minutes, two of our wondrous appearing hosts come to our quarters and announce that I am to accompany them. I have no choice but to comply. I leave my radioman behind, and we walk a short distance and enter into what seems to be an elevator. We descend downward for some moments, the machine stops, and the door lifts silently upward. We then proceed down a long hallway that is lit by a rose-colored light that seems to be emanating from the very walls themselves. One of the beings motions for us to stop before a great door. Over the door is an inscription that I cannot read.

The great door slides noiselessly open, and I am beckoned to enter. One of my hosts speaks. "Have no fear, Admiral; you are to have an audience with the Master..." I step inside and my eyes adjust to the beautiful coloration that seems to be filling the room completely. Then I begin to see my surroundings. What greeted my eyes is the most beautiful sight of my entire existence. It is in fact too beautiful and wondrous to describe. It is exquisite and delicate. I do not think there exists a human term that can describe it in any detail with justice. My thoughts are interrupted in a cordial manner by a warm rich voice of melodious quality, "I bid you welcome to our domain, Admiral." I see a man with delicate features and with the etching of years upon his face. He is seated at a long table. He motions me to sit down in one of the chairs. After I am seated, he places his fingertips together and smiles. He speaks softly again and conveys the following.

"We have let you enter here because you are of noble character and well-known on the Surface World, Admiral." Surface World, I half-gasp under my breath "Yes," the Master replies with a smile, "you are in the domain of the Arianna, the Inner World of the Earth. We shall not long delay your mission, and you will be safely escorted back to the surface and for a distance beyond. But now, Admiral, I shall tell you why you have been summoned here. Our interest rightly begins just after your race exploded the first atomic bombs over Hiroshima and Nagasaki, Japan. It was at that alarming time we sent our flying machines, the "Flugelrads", to your surface world to investigate what your race had done. That is, of course, past history now, my dear Admiral, but I must continue on. You see, we have never interfered before in your race's wars, and barbarity, but now we must, for you have learned to tamper with a certain power that is not for man, namely, that of atomic energy."

"Our emissaries have already delivered messages to the powers of your world, and yet they do not heed. Now you have been chosen to be witness here that our world does exist. You see, our Culture and Science is many thousands of years beyond your race, Admiral." Interrupted, "But what does this have to do with me, Sir?" The Master's eyes seemed to penetrate deeply into my mind, and after studying me for a few moments he replied, "Your race has now reached the point of no return, for there are those among you who would destroy your very world rather than relinquish their power as they know it..." I nodded, and the Master continued", "In 1945 and afterward, we tried to contact your race, but our efforts were met with hostility, our "Flugelrads" were fired upon. Yes, even pursued with malice and animosity by your fighter planes."

So, now, I say to you, my son, there is a great storm gathering in your world, a black fury that will not spend itself for many years. There will be no answer in your arms; there will be no safety in your science. It may rage on until every flower of your culture is trampled, and all human things are leveled in vast chaos. Your recent war was only a prelude of what is yet to come for your race. We here see it more clearly with each hour...do you say I am mistaken? "No, I answer," "it happened once before, the dark ages came, and they lasted for more than five hundred years. "Yes, my son," replied the Master, "the dark ages that will come now for your race will cover the Earth like a pall, but I believe that some of your race will live through the storm, beyond that, I cannot say. We see at a great distance a new world stirring from the ruins of your race, seeking its lost and legendary treasures, and they will be here, my son, safe in our keeping."

"When that time arrives, we shall come forward again to help revive your culture and your race. Perhaps, by then, you will have learned the futility of war and its strife... and after that time, certain of your culture and science will be returned for your race to begin anew. You, my son, are to return to the Surface World with this message." With these closing words, our meeting seemed at an end. I stood for a moment as in a dream.... but, yet I knew this was reality, and for some strange reason I bowed slightly, either out of respect or humility, I do not know which. Suddenly, I was again aware that the two beautiful hosts who had brought me here were again at my side. "This way, Admiral," motioned one. I turned once more before leaving and looked back toward the Master.

A gentle smile was etched on his delicate and ancient face. "Farewell, my son," he spoke, then he gestured with a lovely, slender hand a motion of peace and our meeting was truly ended. Quickly, we walked back through the great door of the Master's chamber and once again entered into the elevator. The door slid silently downward, and we were at once going upward. One of my hosts spoke again, "We must now make haste, Admiral, as the Master desires to delay you no longer on your scheduled timetable and you must return with his message to your race.” I said nothing. All of this was almost beyond belief, and once again my thoughts were interrupted as we stopped. I entered the room and was again with my radio man. He had an anxious expression on his face. As I approached, I said, “It is all right Howie, it is all right.” The two beings motioned us toward the awaiting conveyance; we boarded, and soon arrived back at the aircraft.

The engines were idling, and we boarded immediately. The whole atmosphere seemed charged now with a certain air of urgency. After the cargo door was closed the aircraft was immediately lifted by that unseen force until we reached an altitude of 2700 feet. Two of the aircraft were alongside for some distance guiding us on our return way. I must state here, the airspeed indicator registered no reading, yet we were moving along at a very rapid rate .215 Hours - A radio message comes through. “We are leaving you now, Admiral, your controls are free. Auf Wiedersehen.” [farewell] We watched for a moment as the Flugelrads disappeared into the pale blue sky. The aircraft suddenly felt as though caught in a sharp downdraft for a moment. We quickly recovered her control. We do not speak for some time; each man has his thoughts.

ENTRY IN FLIGHT LOG CONTINUES: 220 Hours - We are again over vast areas of ice and snow, and approximately 27 minutes from base camp. We radio them, they respond. We report all conditions normal....normal. Base camp expresses relief at our re-established contact .300 Hours - We land smoothly at base camp. I have a mission.... END LOG ENTRIES.

Then Admiral Byrds records go on to document his post-expedition actions:

March 11, 1947. I have just attended a staff meeting at the Pentagon. I have stated fully my discovery and the message from the Master. All is duly recorded. The President has been advised. I am now detained for several hours (six hours, thirty- nine minutes, to be exact.) I am interviewed intently by Top Security Forces and a medical team. It was an ordeal I am placed under strict control via the national security provisions of this United States of America.

I am ordered to remain silent in regard to all that I have learned, on the behalf of humanity. Incredible I am reminded that I am a military man, and I must obey orders. 30/12/56: FINAL ENTRY: These last few years elapsed since 1947 have not been kind... I now make my final entry in this singular diary. In closing, I must state that I have faithfully kept this matter secret as directed all these years. It has been completely against my values of moral right. Now, I seem to sense the long night coming on and this secret will not die with me, but as all truth shall, it will triumph and so it shall. This can be the only hope for mankind. I have seen the truth and it has quickened my spirit and has set me free. I have done my duty toward the monstrous military industrial complex.

Now, the long night begins to approach, but there shall be no end. Just as the long night of the Arctic ends, the brilliant sunshine of Truth shall come again....and those who are of darkness shall fall in its Light... FOR I HAVE SEEN THAT LAND BEYOND THE POLE, THAT CENTER OF THE GREAT UNKNOWN.

Admiral Richard E. Byrd: United States Navy: 24 December 1956

Admiral Byrd was an Admiral in the United States Navy. He was an educated man. He wrote this on Christmas Eve. He was an adventurer and explorer. He was taken in their craft to Agartha where he met with “the Master.” These benevolent beings reportedly live to be nearly 800 years old. President Eisenhower met these beings in 1954. The Atomic Bomb introduced us to the life below the surface. Oppenheimer probably didn’t know they were there because we detonated nuclear bombs in the evil beings world. There are evil beings and benevolent beings, It sounds like we more than likely bombed the evil ones.

The benevolent beings have known we were here all along. They watch and they coach. They do not intervene, they guide. They do not appear to change mans destiny. We are like their little brother or sister that they’e coaching. They are separate and apart from the evil, uncivilized world.

The secret diary is posted in a variety of places on line, here is one, of many, links:

The secret diary is considered by some to be a fabricated hoax. It is not a hoax, it is the thoughts of a man struggling with honor to himself and his country versus knowledge and honor to his fellow man. It’s a dichotomy of emotion. He gave his word to never reveal this information. By writing it down for revelation after his death, it cleared his conscious.

Admiral Byrd was an amazing and courageous person. Admiral Byrd should have an Ark named for him.

John Lear was a CIA pilot who spoke publicly about life within the Earth. Who was John Lear? Well, John was the son of Bill Lear. Maybe you've heard of "LearJets?" That's them. John Lear was an educated man, he flew for the CIA for years. John Lear knew aviation at a deeper level than almost anyone alive. John had a level and depth of aviation knowledge and access to information far above and beyond a normal "pilot." John worked on the inside of government. John was a very smart man. John describes his interaction with and knowledge about advanced Inner Earth beings in televised interviews available on the internet. The information he reveals is publicly available and seems entirely accurate. He describes aliens with powers and knowledge that far exceeds anything man is capable of.

The information John shares is disturbing and frankly, that's why I think that it's not widely shared. Not surprisingly, John and others that talk about life inside the earth speak 'matter of factly' for a reason. They don't grapple with whether or not these beings exist, they focus on the details of their interaction. That in itself is very telling.

John Lear provided detail that matched very closely information from Admiral Byrd and others with respect to life inside the Earth. Don't take my word for it, take his.

John was a smart and a travelled man. Listen to what John says and listen to what he does not say.

John was saying what Admiral Byrd and Phil Schneider were each saying. There are live beings with advanced cultures living inside planet earth. In practical terms, it is not a possibility or a probability, it is an absolute.

Who's Phil Schneider? Well, it's complicated. Phil Schneider was the worst enemy of Phil Schneider. Phil suffered from an extreme case of a sense of betrayal by the United States Government after his family emigrated from Germany.

Phil was just a kid and his dad was one of the brainiacs that the U.S. gained from World War II. Phil's father and then eventually Phil worked deep inside the government. Phil knew a lot, but like everyone else with a security clearance, Phil only knew what was going on in his part of the government. He didn't have the 'whole picture' nor did he have knowledge of all the moving parts. Because of this, Phil was mad. He felt that he and his family were betrayed by the very government they came here to help. Basically, Phil was pissed and he was gonna let the world know it!

Well, he did. But he did it so ineffectively that the message got lost. Phil was a very smart man but Phil was not a very good verbal communicator. Phil did not lie, but his message was obscured by emotion. If you eliminate all of the emotion from what he said, all the inflammatory language and distain, and just look at the facts as he stated them, there is a lot of information there. He was on a rant but, aside from the all the venomous emotion, Phil "spilled the beans." He revealed everything he had seen and experienced. Phil confirmed what the others had been saying, we are not alone and we are not on the top of Earth's food chain.

Phil was a very Smart man who had the highest level of access. Phil knew a lot of 'secret' information that he wasn't supposed to reveal. But Phil was on a vendetta. Unfortunately, he was not a good public speaker. Paraphrasing some of his remarks, Phil said that these evil beings would eliminate 5/6 to 7/8ths of the world's population by 2029.

The scary part about Phil's 2029 end of life prediction is that when someone mentioned a celestial event that could destroy the galaxy in the 2050s. He not only knew about it, he totally dismissed it in importance. To him, it was inconsequential since the world would end in 2029. That nuance is disturbingly revealing.

Don't take my word for it, take Phil's:

<https://www.youtube.com/playlist?list=PLncYwFWXJRrT9zszXmLpVIq-R6sAQzZJN>

Phil reportedly died by suicide. A very sloppy 'suicide.'

What did all these men have to gain from these revelations? Nothing, nothing but ridicule. What did they gain from these revelations? Nothing, nothing but ridicule.

All three men say virtually the same thing, at different times, with similarities and uncommon, but plausible scenarios. Their combined accounts indicate that by the year 2029, life on the surface of the Earth, could end as we know it. Coincidence?

The Aliens told Admiral Byrd that it would be “many years” before the black fury appeared. That was 77 years ago, 2029 will be 82 years from that conversation. Is that “many years?” Seems like it could be. That would correlate Byrds timeline to Schneider’s. Coincidence? We’ll find out in a few years.

LAYERS OF THE EARTH

While specific details and descriptions in stories may vary, the basic premise remains the same. Advanced life exists. Not only does it exist, it is literally right here on (or in) Earth. Right now, as you read this, there are layers inside this planet that contain advanced civilizations. Some of those civilizations are friendly, some are evil. It is Predator and Prey. There are species that are benevolent (kind) to man, malevolent (evil) to man and some are ambivalent to man. Do not underestimate the evil of the evil creatures. I won't go into detail because it is not worth propagating.

The creatures spotted near Taos, New Mexico are a good example of ambivalent (not evil) creatures. They probably looked at these hunters like we would look at a squirrel. Interesting, but not worth interacting with.

Sound far-fetched? It's not. There are two friends in Arizona that went Elk hunting and witnessed these beings. Josh and Daniel were Elk hunting in Arizona when they witnessed these beings on the surface. They saw the beings and they saw their craft (ship) before it disappeared into the Earth. Don't take my word for it, take theirs:

https://www.taosnews.com/news/local-news/a-taos-close-encounter-of-the-hunters-and-aliens-kind/article_4adbbf31-7978-5121-8c1f-b1d98587f03d.html

The craft that they witnessed didn't fly anywhere, it submerged into the earth like a submarine through the ocean. The road heaved as it penetrated the surface. These UFOs can fly through the air and they “fly” through the ground like a submarine. They (and others) have witnessed this. We tend to overlook that fact because we’re hyper focused on “flying.”

Based on descriptions of this and other encounters, the Earth has many layers. Within the layers, there are probably geographic variances similar to the lands and waters of the surface. It is diverse and less than 1% of it is known to science. Many layers or regions inside the Earth, to some extent, contain life.

Some of that life might be indigenous to Earth, some may not. No one knows.

At least one layer appears to be a civilization. They have, over time, tunneled deep inside the Earth and established a civilization that is protected from the evil. Their technology gives them “all access” to all parts of the planet and beyond. Legends have many names but “Agartha” seems to be the predominant name. Some believe Agartha is the origin of the Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden story. The Cave of the Patriarchs in the middle east is considered by some to be one of the entrances to this land. Agartha is a physical place within planet Earth. It is not in another dimension but it is likely below or shielded from Earths magma. Their technology is not impacted by nor is their world susceptible to the effects of magma. This is conjecture but it is highly probable.

Coincidentally, diamonds are formed deeper than lava, they travel to the surface but they are formed below lava. That makes sense when people try to describe the beauty and crystallized structures in Agartha. Diamond could actually play a role in forming the protective layer between Agartha and the magma above. Diamonds or similar minerals probably play important roles in the separation of the civilized and uncivilized worlds. Diamonds and crystals would account for the visual descriptions of a futuristic land. It would almost seem like you had been transported to a different planet, dimension or time. In reality, this 'other world' is just very deep within the Earth.

The evil species, the dark evil, they sound to me like satan himself. If subsurface evolution in any way mimics surface evolution, satan has thousands of different sub-species. That's not a presumption, it's an ecological and evolutionary process. Due to the presumed size of that (dark) civilization, I suspect that civilization lives above the magma layer. Their world isn't limited to beneath land, their world covers the inside of the Earth's surface, below the oceans. The oceans are essentially a 'wet spot' on the scale of the Earth's depth and layers. The deepest point in the ocean is 35,000 feet, the Earth is 21 million feet deep to the center. The ocean is .2% of the depth of the Earth, visualize that. It's like an ink stain on a bowling ball. Consider the magnitude and diversity of life in the ocean then consider the insignificance of its depth versus the earth.

The surface world and the dark species world do occasionally cross paths. With the advent of social media and video technology, the internet is littered with examples of strange events that sometime defy explanation. The problem is, the internet is like Phil Schneider's rant. It's so full of 'other stuff' that it's hard to separate fact from fiction. Some of what you see is real, you just can't tell 'what' so you discard everything. Look at it from the perspective "it all might be real," then weed out the fake. Trends reveal truths, if you see trends, somewhere in there hides the truth. Life exists inside Earth.

Sound far-fetched? Well, there are two brothers in Arizona that went Elk hunting and witnessed it. Don't take my word for it, take theirs. Josh Brinkley and Daniel Lucero were Elk hunting in Arizona when they witnessed one of the events. Don't take my word for it, take theirs. They saw the craft before it disappeared into the Earth. Here is just one report about their experience.

https://www.taosnews.com/news/local-news/a-taos-close-encounter-of-the-hunters-and-aliens-kind/article_4adbbf31-7978-5121-8c1f-b1d98587f03d.html

Based on descriptions of this and other encounters, the Earth has many layers and regions. Within the layers, there are variances similar to the surface. The surface is not a solid layer and neither is every sublayer. The subsurface is diverse and less than 1% of it is known to science.

SURVIVING THE CYCLE OF LIFE ON EARTH

Surviving the terrestrial cycle of life on Earth is problematic. The only real solution seems to be sheltering under ground. Curiously, even the ‘the Master’ reveals that science or arms won’t defend against the black fury. It might help in survival techniques, but this ‘black fury’ seems unbeatable. The Master told Admiral Byrd that “there is a great storm brewing inside your world, a black fury that will not spend itself for many years. There will be no answer in your arms; there will be no safety in your science. It may rage on until every flower of your culture is trampled, and all human things are leveled in vast chaos.” Even a coastal bunker wouldn’t guarantee survival because it could end up submerged. The safest bet is likely where man has always bunkered, in the deserts and mountains.

It sounds like ‘the Master’ was describing a rapture on the surface of the Earth. The “black fury” is probably a swarm, a literal swarm of creatures that will arise from the Earth. The 3600 year cicadas. It sounds exactly like the ‘End of Life’ that occurs every 3600 years. The similarities in reports and warnings cannot be overlooked.

Survival in the form of bunkering has worked in the past so presumably it will work again. I think our tunneling more than likely took the form of “shelter building” after the transportation network was completed. I say that because the increase of activity was decades after the proliferation of nuclear weapons.

Think about the amount of people you can effectively house on a cruise ship, 5000-6000. Look how small a footprint that ship really takes up, it's essentially microscopic on the scale of the planet. You could put a lot of cruise ships under the ground in the form of a tunnel matrix. Miners did this by hand, imagine what we can accomplish with nuclear subterrenes. Remember, these are real, not fictional. Creating space is probably the easiest challenge to overcome. The logistics and infrastructure of maintaining an underground society, well, that's obviously the challenge. It would literally be the biggest human public works project in the history of mankind. From an accomplishment standpoint, if we can put a man on the moon, why couldn't we put 100 million under the ground? Everything we've learned in space, life inside the space station, food, waste, all of that could be used for underground confined survival. President Eisenhower would have been one of the architects for the Ark infrastructure. President (General) Eisenhower ("Ike") understood commitment, tactics and long term goals. He understood strategy and politics. I think if one person was capable of directing such an undertaking, 'Ike' would be that person.

And I hope we're doing it, 2029 is coming pretty quickly.

If 2029 is the end-date of life and if there's a 'Planet Z,' it should have an increasingly noticeable impact on the planet. As the planet heats from the inside out, it will be hard to detect since we only have sensors in extreme shallow depths. This will probably look like global warming but at an increasingly record pace. All atmospheric phenomenon will increase in intensity and frequency. Earthquakes, ocean tides, and volcanic activity will all increase. Volcanic activity will start to occur along fault lines and locations that have been dormant for years. With the atmospheric changes, animal patterns and behaviors will change. Subsurface species will begin to appear on the surface. If the Earth is heating from inside, predator will follow prey toward the surface. We will see an increase in 'strange creatures' or 'paranormal' phenomenon.

The heating of Earth from the inside-out accounts for symptoms of global warming that the Earth is already undergoing. The world is changing atmospherically, that is fact. The pace of change will increase exponentially in the coming months and years if this theory is true. It will be an escalation, not an instantaneous event. This phenomenon will increase and then subside as the comet approaches and departs. Global warming Is real, the cause of global warming might be more complicated than science thought.

Events will occur and then subside with a doppler-like effect, or sound of an approaching train getting louder as it approaches. Events will increase in frequency and intensity and then taper off until life 'normalizes.'

This is actually occurring and has been for some time. Chupacabras? Chupacabras are literally a 'joke' but even science is starting to prove they're real. People call them a fictional beast or Mexican Dog, dog with mange or unexplained canine looking animal. These can be seen widely on the internet. DNA samples don't match existing DNA so some of these are categorized as "unidentified species." The reported cases are increasing. The advent of social media makes information sharing worldwide and readily available. Big Foot, Yeti, SkinWalkers, Shapeshifters, we will see an increase in that type activity as well. The likelihood is that shapeshifters and skin walkers are one in the same. The Moth-man, or a flying animal is another common phenomenon. I would not be surprised if the Moth-man exists, I would be surprised if they didn't exist. They are reported throughout the world. Maybe the Moth-man is a stray 3600 year cicada? Legendary species have similar descriptions so different cultures have named them different things. This doesn't make them fake, it actually adds credibility and probability to their very existence.

Along the Sierra Range in California there have been reports of similar beasts appearing in different locations. From Tuolumne Meadows in Yosemite to a sledding hill on Mt Shasta, people have reported mammals that resemble descriptions of skin walkers and shapeshifters. These animals favor their hind legs while moving slow but run using all four legs. Their descriptions are all exactly like an oversized Chupacabra animal. Like a wolf compared to a fox. It is very likely that these are similar, but larger species.

The fact that a lot of these subterranean species reports are consistent is also reflects how an underground ecosystem would develop or evolve. Their appearance doesn't vary depending on geographic location. That's because their environment isn't impacted by atmospheric conditions. Werewolf descriptions in Europe are similar to North American Shapeshifter reports, we just call them different names. Look at all the similarities of Earth's reported creatures, there are many. There is life deep underground, that is indisputable. The extent and the variety of that life is unknown. If you look at the surface creatures, there's little reason to think the subsurface is any less diverse. It is truly more diverse than you, or I, can imagine.

Don't take my word for any of the above, research it. Internet data is like social media content, it is so widely accessible that it makes it hard to determine what's real. The information is out there but you have to analyze it.

Analytical concept #2 - Little news is Big news. When you hear 20 minutes of who's bombing who or who's on what ballot or list, there's probably a volcano or Earthquake having a significant impact somewhere in the world. If you see a war break out in your hemisphere, pay attention to what else is going on in the world. See what trends you notice.

UNDERGROUND SURVIVAL

We do have structures underground, I don't know the extent or capacity but I hope they are "Arks." Based on the level of surface, space and undersea activity in recent decades, I suspect we have limited 'Ark' space underwater, underground and in space. Coincidentally, one of the most vocal UFO enthusiasts has gone relatively quiet in recent years. The company, Bigelow Aerospace, makes expandable space modules, almost like blow-up shipping crates but for use in space. Bigelow has been very busy in the past decade. Their technology would be just as applicable subsurface as it is in space.

Coincidentally, Mr. Bigelow bought the Skin-walker Ranch in Utah. An area reportedly associated with paranormal activity. He has since sold it. Based on the success of his company, it seems that Mr. Bigelow could be well connected in government since it deals with the space industry. He could be helping them prepare/ Skin-walker Ranch was more than likely a spot where one of these underground creatures lived. It's just an animal so it moved on or died, there's nothing there now except TV cameras.

Interestingly. Bigelow Aerospace underwent a massive expansion in 2010. I won't divulge their 'secrets' because it is likely related to Arks. Don't be surprised if you see the name “Bigelow Aerospace” painted on the side of a shelter someday.

SPACEX AND SURVIVAL

SpaceX seems to me like it's in a space race against some invisible force. They are launching and landing rockets at a record pace. A publicly advertised but little talked about aspect of their program is global video space surveillance. This is a game changer. It expands the capability for worldwide video coverage. The government has exclusive use of this technology. They can monitor the entire world in real time video, from anywhere. Even from deep within an Ark. The technology is called StarShield. It's the high-tech version of StarLink.

The 'vibe' I get as I observe government activity is that we are approaching some type of finish line. There seems to be an all-out blitz of deploying technology and resources in preparation for something. Something big is happening. No one is talking about it publicly, yet. We're scurrying below ground and in space, preparing for something. It makes the year 2029 seem even closer than ever before. Something is happening and we know Apophis is coming and I suspect Planet Z and it is not our friend. It comes to visit every 3600(ish) years. I think we could be at year 3595 of this cycle.

Fun Fact - NASA's Small Bodies Assessment Group is trying to get the UN to declare 2029 the year of Planetary Defense. Coincidence?

CONCLUSION

That's a lot "to unpack" so I'll sum up my theory: The end of life on Earth as we know it could occur as early as 2029, less than five years from now. This appears to be a pattern for planet Earth. It is a (roughly) 3600 year cycle of terrestrial surface life. Indications are that this cycle will end by raising living beasts to the surface of the Earth that will devour everything that isn't made of stone, pure metal or jewels. Very little else will survive. Human survival will require relocation and sheltering in the subsurface of the Earth. It happened to the Indus, it happened to the Mayans, the Khmer empire and the Indus civilization. It has happened in the western hemisphere to the Mississippians (not the state), a civilization of 40,000 people over a thousand years ago. It happened to the Clovis culture in the U.S. Southwest. These are not anomalies, they are similarities. This type event will happen again.

Regardless of someone's beliefs, the trends and similarities are beyond coincidental.

Conspiracy theorists talk about a New World Order or "secret government," MJ12. Indications are that there does seem to be some sort of governing body that is planning and directing all these activities. At least I hope there is because the only way to maintain continuity and achieve success with an undertaking of that magnitude would be to eliminate political influence, a process democracy is mired in. I hope President Eisenhower assembled "Ike's Army" to combat this world challenge.

Now that we see billionaires building underground bunkers, it's possible that word of this is probably leaking out. The security protocols that people associate with a private underground complex in Hawaii closely resemble the governments procurement and concealment programs. Coincidence?

I'd like to say "we're all in this together" but I'm not that naive.

A lot of people that meet me often wonder, "what's going on inside that guys head?"

Well, now you know. This story is a small part of what's going on in my head. What's perplexing to me is that no one else has concluded this same thing. I think people might be "saying" the same thing or parts of it, but to my knowledge, no one has analyzed it publicly.

Whether or not this is true will be determined by history. Whether or not you believe it is up to you. I just provided some topics for you to consider. All of these topics are easily searchable on-line or in public records.

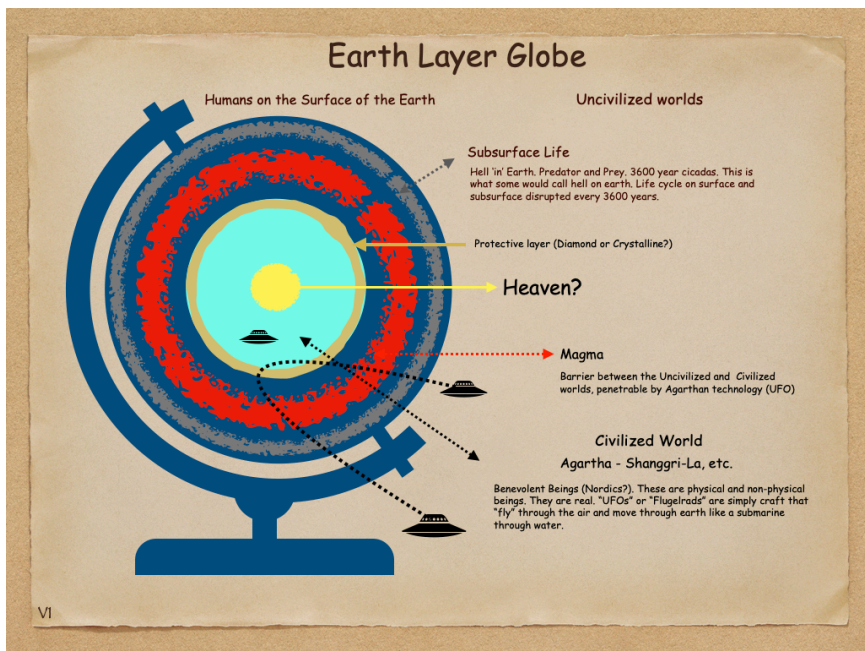

The only purpose of this is to inform others if the theory is true. I have nothing to gain from any of this. This is just a story.

2029 could be an epoch year, we'll know soon.
