

Another True Story

HEAVENLY

KHSCRIB

The Black Fury

1

The Black Fury, The Flood, Climate Change - all of these things appear to be one and the same. It is a single event of biblical proportion. And, it happens on a cyclical basis. By that, I mean the real 'climate change' will be unlike anything that you've ever envisioned. It will be the end and then the beginning on Life on Earth we know it. A regeneration of life ON Earth. All life on Earth. Let me explain...

My stories contain a lot of different information but the only real message you need is: Our Spirits are real and they are eternal.

Everything else is simply a distraction that's blocking us from Spiritual fulfillment. We've conditioned ourselves to exist in a sort of psychosis of fear with the ultimate end fear of Death. Well, Death isn't 'a thing' at least, not like you've been taught.

Your Spirit is eternal. YOU will never 'die' as you've been taught all your life. More on this in a bit.

Doomsday, aliens, UFOs, it all sounds right out of a movie right? Well, it is. It's all in my movie. My life is my movie. Stick with me, this will become clearer but all these things are related.

Doomsday is also ‘a thing.’ It isn’t just a mythical legend or cataclysmic biblical lore. It is a recurring phenomenon. It is not “Doomsday” it is “Regeneration of Life Day.” Governments and militaries of the world have literally been preparing for some type of “Doomsday” for decades. Doomsday will be the rebirth of your Spirit so please, don’t despair of “what” or even “when” Doomsday will be. I think I know...

Fun Fact: The United States military has a fleet of Doomsday aircraft to assume emergency airborne command. These planes can replicate (code for: replace) all aspects of government. One of these aircraft is airborne at all times.

Planet Earth has a long history of cataclysmic events. Extinction events. These events end and then restore all life on the planets surface (and much of the Ocean). This regeneration is normal for the planet but foreign to humans because no one survives. Every religious text, from the Bible to the Quran refers to flooding of biblical proportions.

A global flood is more than likely the Black Fury that The Master mentioned when he spoke with Admiral Byrd in 1947. Following a trip to Antarctica and preceding his death, Admiral Byrd wrote a secret diary on Christmas Eve. Two months before his death. Admiral Byrd’s health was failing and it is likely that on Christmas Eve he was reflecting and documenting his life. He knew he was in his final days and needed to “download” onto paper what he knew. Admiral Byrd’s character makes the contents of the diary “likely” true. As an intelligence analyst, I would describe the events in his diary as more than likely or “probable,” in your mind that should translate to what he said is “true.”

Of all the Earth’s populations (fauna, fish and mammals) there is no evidence that anything is alive on planet Earth that is older than 4800 years old. Bristlecone pine trees in Nevada and California are slightly younger than 5000 years old. Even the Giant Redwood trees are less than 4000 years old. ALL of those oldest trees are located in the western United States. Doesn't that seem odd, the planet has been here for billions of years and yet our oldest life just had its 4800th birthday? That seems rather odd. It's because the Black Fury is a recurring event that resets Earth's clock... and Life.

Conservatively, science says that there is no living thing on Earth that is older than 5000 years old. Truthfully, there probably is, in the ocean. We have no idea what's truly out there. The ocean puzzle is still in the box.

All over the world, every artifact and historical record is either buried or in a cave or earthen shelter of some type. Pyramids in the desert, Temples in the jungles and fossils in rocks. We see carvings on rocks and inside caves. But, there is no continuity or tangible link between those ancient civilizations and our current civilization. There's no linkage between many civilizations on Earth, just scientific migratory speculation.

Historical records or accounts of prior civilizations (times) are all recorded with stone or preserved via burial of some type. In addition, all the preceding civilizations are buried.

There are as many gaps in the human genome as there are in human evolutionary timelines. Evolution is not a 'thing' like science tries to sell. The odds of humans evolving or otherwise 'descending' from either an African person or a single couple named "Adam and Eve" are equally absurd. Adam and Eve get all the press. Even with no scientific training, I think most humans would surmise that Adam and Eve were probably just the first one's off the bus (code for: UFO) on 'couples night' in the new world following the last Black Fury.

Every historical record on Earth is either buried or discovered inside an earthen structure. Pyramids and Temples are constructed in a manner that as massive volumes of water recede, their design makes it the most likely structure to be revealed, or discoverable. Those structures protrude from the ground in nearly every region of the world. Stone is the only thing that survives. Temples, Pyramids, Stonehenge, carvings, many from different time periods.

Civilizations existed and then, for some reason, they disappeared. Other civilizations appeared, then disappeared. Usually science blames “climate change.” They find plausible scenarios for extinction level events and then dig some more, find different artifacts then the stories pivot. Science, like religions, adapt to new discoveries and often pivots.

Civilizations have left their record for the next generations through stone structures and art. This was likely due to them replicating or mimicking structures that their civilizations discovered as they were established. Copying or adding to temples over time.

One similarity between the Pyramids and Temples is a universal design throughout the world. It’s as if someone instructed each civilization on how to construct a structure that could survive an apocalypse (flood) but be available for the next generation.

The Flood or “Black Fury” is that apocalypse.

The square bottom and stepped sides of the Pyramid and Temple is the ‘tell’ in the design. I am not a dynamicist but I suspect the design of a pyramid is the most effective design for a deluge of biblical proportion. The structure will withstand phenomenal impact forces from any angle as mountains of water make impact. Not coincidentally, the square, stepped design is also the most effective at deflecting debris and silt as the mountains of water, mud and debris recede. Those Pyramids, Temples and Stone Heads are all that you see when the oceans recede. The Easter Island Heads are not as efficient at shedding debris. Those 'heads' actually have complete bodies. The bodies are just buried because that design wasn't quite as efficient as the pyramids. I think this is a sign that the islanders had a better sense of humor than the Egyptians or Mayans. Everything, everywhere of historical significance is buried, except temples, pyramids and other earthen structures.

I suspect that in the not-so-distant future, the Kingdom of England will have more than Stonehenge to wonder about.

Oh, I almost forgot my friend the Sphinx! That crazy cat doesn't shed sand well either. Lesson learned, if you're going to make a statue in your yard, make a pyramid, not a cat statue. If I make it to the Black Fury, I'll be holding my cats as we all go out to together...

Fun Fact: My cats traveled around North America in a RV and seemed to enjoy it. I can't speak cat but ((God)) willing, I will in the future. I'm lobbying The Master for 'Catman' as a future species. Catman will be different than the Sphinx because the Sphinx was phased out for one reason or another. Over worship much?

So, to summarize, and you might get a kick out of this: The Earth will be flooded at a proportion that not only will end all life, it will erase all trace of life. Nothing will be left. The oceans will shift and lands will be buried and revealed. Mountains will rise and fall.

The oceans will flood every continent on the planet. The Black Fury will shift tectonic plates and create global volcanic activity.

Lava will fall from the sky, it will rain down fireballs. It will be an apocalyptic hell of biblical proportion, and I mean that figuratively and literally. It will spark a sort of mini ice age that will last generations.

Crazy right?!?! Stick with me, things get better.

Doomsday theories have been around forever. I do like conspiracy theories but I also like plausibility. I think many theories are plausible, but in a different context than you probably do. Religions and the governments throughout the world have been warning us for years but no one is paying attention. There's so much white noise people have a hard time sorting fact from fiction.

In 'Earth 2029' I explained why Life on Earth might end by 2029. I'm not sure of the timeline because it was only based on one individual's testimony. So yes, I think it is possible and even likely that Life on Earth will end due to a cataclysmic flood, possibly within the next five years. Yes, that's not a typo, 5 years.

What should get your attention is that I used to write, edit, summarize and sanitize daily classified Intelligence Summaries (INTSUMs) for President Ronald Regan in the 1980s. I know what those words mean.

But here's the good news, YOU won't die.

Your spirit is real and it is eternal. Your spirit is the YOU that you feel, not the YOU that you see.

Back to the flood - Biblical flooding has been theorized for years. The focus seems to be around the mediterranean and middle eastern areas of the planet because it tends to be focused on religious theology and it's a 'religious' conversation.

Flooding is difficult to assess because it can happen for a variety of reasons on a variety of scales. The Black Fury will be a global, not a regional event.

Look around the globe but look from a high altitude perspective, on a global scale. Look at the Earth's terrain. It is awash with geological evidence of global drainage. The proof is right there. The salinity levels in high altitude lakes in South America, North America and Tibet were all filled with sea water not so long ago. Many still are today! They were filled because all of those areas, everything you see, was under the ocean.

All the water that will ever be on the planet Earth is already here. That is a scientific fact. Earth's rotation consolidates the oceans' waters along the equator. Any talk of melting poles causing coastal flooding, while factually correct, pales in comparison to what is about to transpire.

There are only a few plausible ways for the Earth's oceans to create the type of global destruction that the Black Fury will have. The shifting of the Earth's crust creating earthquakes that cause massive flooding or more likely, a change to the planet's rotation.

A gradual decline in the Earth's rotating speed will lengthen day and night and cause the oceans to recede toward the north and south poles.

The planet doesn't look like the moon for one simple reason, the wind and water smooth it. Continents grow and shrink with each Black Fury. Pangea was real, the rest of the information surrounding the formation of planets is scientific speculation.

Pangea wasn't millions of years ago, it was probably tens of thousands of years or less.

People assume Noah's Ark might be located in Turkey. The whole "Noah" conversation focuses on the Ark, Moses and his sons. Maybe a squirrel. Many people forget that this flood, was not confined to the middle east. The world shows signs of flooding in every region and on every continent. Biblical flooding was NOT confined to the middle east, geology proves it was a global event.

The problem with floods is that they expose as much as they bury. Science cannot establish a logical timeline without infusing "climate change" or other theories as rationale. Isn't that odd? Sound familiar?

Climate change is also blamed for the disappearance of the Indus Valley Civilization which is thought to be one of the oldest on Earth. The Mayans, Mesopotamia, Egypt, Indigenous peoples of the Americas. Every time a civilization disappears science seems to blame a lack of rain so everyone moved....? Apparently all those huge Temples the Mayans built, Machu Picchu, the Pyramids, all those structures were just abandoned and people moved...?

More 'crazy,' right?!?!? Yes. That is a crazy proposition.

Climate Change is real but you probably weren't thinking about cataclysmic flooding and the Black Fury. The ugly truth is, the government has been part of the Climate Change dialogue since its inception. They aren't hiding anything. From now on, when you hear "climate change" think a global flood, not a gradual increase in temperatures. The temperatures right now are a symptom but not 'proof' of a flood. That 'proof' will come one day, and you'll know it when it happens.

The Black Fury is probably the primary reason fossil fuels are so abundant. Fossil fuels aren't just dinosaurs, it is all of Earth's prior civilizations. The source of our oil is decomposed organic material, that is code for "prior civilizations." That's future code for "us."

Maybe the Earth has a fossil fuel limit and we're approaching it...? I don't think that's the case but I definitely sense the end is approaching.

I'm kind of like the guy on the corner with the sign "The End is Near!" The difference is, I'm sitting on my couch saying it with a keyboard. Here's the kicker, I'm not crazy! :-) And, neither is the guy on the corner. He's just overwhelmed.

Science gets confused on Earth's timelines because they naturally study time as a linear process. Earth's Life Cycle is a circular process that happens on a linear basis. It is a series of life cycles that are separated by brief periods of glacial activity or mini ice ages. These lifecycles are of an unknown period of time, they could be anywhere from 1000 years to 12,000 years. The timespan is anyone's guess but likely known to a very few uniformed military personnel. When the cycle started really isn't important. When the Life Cycle ends? That is the mystery, but the Mystery is called "Black Fury."

This change, the flood, the Black Fury will take years to complete its cycle. Humans will only see the initial surges. After that, it's just kinetic energy. Water sloshing around the planet like water in a bathtub. Volcanos will erupt and the surface will quake. Earth's waters and atmosphere will appear Black. Neither you nor I will ever witness this phase of the Black Fury, we'll perish early on.

Thankfully, The Master and his Team have a plan (and so does the military). While some of the organisms under the ground and deep within the Oceans will survive this cataclysm will end nearly all existing life; plant and animal. Thankfully, our Spirits will survive. Spirits are not subject to physical harm. We will be reborn into Ariana (Heaven?) Where we started.

Here's the other good news, I CHOSE to be here, and I think you did too. You just don't know it yet. This life is my movie and you are my co-stars.

There are only a few ways that the Ocean can shift with such force.

1. An impact event from space could cause catastrophic flooding on a global or regional level. These events happen but they are not cyclical so they are distracting to science.

2. An Earthquake can have the same effect on a regional level.

3. A cymatic vibration (sound/frequency) could vibrate the lands and water in a variety of ways. Cymatic vibration could make ground liquify like a strong Earthquake. The result would be almost like a quicksand that swallowed entire regions.

Whatever happens, the Black Fury will be of epic and biblical proportion. If you survive to witness the advanced stages, it will defy comprehension.

The most plausible cataclysm I can imagine is that the Earth will undergo a reversal of rotation, from east to west. That change will alter the axis and there will be a polar shift, loss of ultra violet protection and temporary disruption of Earth's atmosphere.

This will be a global extinction level event.

Crazy right?!?!?! Not so fast. We're overdue for a polar shift. The last one was over 700,000 years ago. Science says the poles shift every 300,000 years on average...? Sounds like we're roughly 400,000 overdue or someone is using new math. That science seems to make a polar shift imminent. The perception of such timeframes blurs human perspective.

Okay, how do we move Oceans? Well, the Earth rotates to the East at over 1000 miles per hour. The Equator is the middle of the axis point. It's the Earth's 'belly' where all the water gathers. Since the Earth is spinning, if it were to STOP, everything not attached to it would just fly off to the east at 1000 mph. We'd all die instantly. That will not happen because rumors of floods persist so there is a level of 'witnesses' to some of the chaos. That indicates the onset will be semi gradual. I don't know if that means days or weeks, but it'll be a doozy, I know that.

I theorize that the earth will undergo a slowing, or reduction in speed until it stops. The Earth will then begin to rotate to the West and oceans will normalize. This pattern of flooding seems likely when you look at the world on a global scale. When the earth slows, the water that is pooled along the equator will recede from the equator towards the poles.

This change in rotation would send oceans over continents, moving tectonic plates and creating volcanoes and earthquakes. It will reshape the land. It really will be hell on Earth but you won't be here to see it.

The Earth is powered by a force. No, don't blame this on (God), this isn't about a (God). This is about the Earth rotating. That rotation, or power that is spinning the Earth will decrease until the Earth's rotation comes to a stop and eventually restarts in the opposite direction. The Earth is not randomly spinning like a top, it is powered like an airplane. The slowing of the Earth will be a lot like the deceleration of an airplane. You don't "hit the brakes" in an airplane. You reduce the amount of power so it goes slower. In a car, you hit the brakes, there is a clear sensation of the vehicle slowing because brakes are slowing the vehicle. Planes don't "slow down" by hitting the brakes. They slow down by reducing the amount of power given to the motor. Unless you hear the engine being throttled back, you have almost no sensation that an aircraft is slowing down.

Fun Fact: In April 2024 the Polar Vortex at the North Pole that establishes weather patterns reversed course. It changed from an east rotation to a westerly direction.

Bonus Fun Fact: In January of 2023 the inner core of the Earth stopped spinning... and now, it's spinning in the opposite direction.

I'll just stop here for a minute. These fun facts are tongue and cheek sarcasm. They are also true.

I'll type this slowly, the Earth's core has already changed direction. That changes the game. If I haven't gotten your attention yet, please, stop reading now.

The Earth will behave like the airplane, we won't be able to tell it's slowing at first. We won't sense it until it becomes significant enough to alter day and night. Parts of the world will likely sense an eclipse because the Sun will be absent.

The oceans surge will determine the magnitude of the earthquakes and volcanos. Some of our satellites will capture some of the chaos but whether or not that gets retained for future generations, well, that's another interesting story.

This flood or "Black Fury" is probably what The Master discussed with Admiral Byrd and referenced in his 'secret diary.' Admiral Byrd is our modern day Noah. “Black Fury” probably gets its name because all light will be blocked from the planet during this process and it will look like an apocalyptic hell. The ocean and the sky would all appear black for a time.

Human Arks will probably save some of the population. I assume we have at least three Arks. Hopefully they’re named “Byrd,” “Truman” and “Eisenhower.” That seems like the logical group that made all of this possible. They were some of the individuals that were privy to this level of information after we discovered atomic energy. Those bombs surprised our subterranean partners and, it appears that we all got off to a rocky start.

As the Earth starts moving in the opposite direction, things will slowly normalize over time. Waters will recede, seeds will sprout from the ground and life will begin anew. The Master and his Team will show up throughout the world and repopulate regions with whichever species they wish to continue.

We (humans) were lucky during the last regeneration because The Master left us sustenance. He left plants and animals and to this day, people are STILL bickering over WHAT to eat and how to eat it. The Black Fury will bring an end to that argument. People won’t eat cows, some won’t eat pigs, others won’t eat meat. Can you imagine the nutritionist that works for the Master?!?! What a picky bunch the human race has become. We are a very “high maintenance” species.

The only flaw I saw in the last regeneration is that when they dropped off the new guys and gals the fauna was immature so there were insufficient trees to build shelter. Our ancestors were forced to live underground for years. Some built communities in the mountains, some tunneled into the desert and in America, they built houses on cliffs. In Turkey they dug multi-level tunnel systems that housed entire communities.

The last Black Fury happened a very short time ago, probably within the past few thousand years. I WILL happen again, soon.

One trend seems constant around the world as humans repopulated regions. The new humans all built high in the mountains and then migrated down towards the oceans as communities grew.

Adam and Eve somehow got all the press during the last regeneration and I think I know why. Something happened in the garden, only they and The Master know what was said. Until I hear it from one of them (and I will), I won't speculate further.

Adam and Eve have gotten enough air time and text over the years. No one seems to care about the black people in Africa that were dropped off, or the people of the middle East, or the Caucasians, or the Asians, the Indians, the Native Americans, the Latinos, etc. What's very telling is that even the human species can't agree on how many races there are on the planet.

Earth also still has little tribes scattered around the world, they don't get any "air time" either. They are mostly ignored. Lucky them right!!! Guess what, no money - no bills, literally. Woot!

The Tribe on Sentinel Island south of India is one such tribe. They exist in isolation, a culture and civilization (nearly) untouched by the outside world. Sentinel and other rain forest tribes are as close to "indigenous" as the human species gets. But for some reason, everything is always about "Adam and Eve." Marsha, Marsha, Marsha!

Okay, back to basics. The Sentinelese are living in isolation on a tiny Island 5 miles long by 4 miles wide. It is inconceivable (code for “impossible”) that a group of people could survive on a patch of dirt that small and survive that long. This tribe is literally living proof that the last Black Fury was not that long ago. I encourage you to find an actuary and have a discussion about North Sentinel Island.

Fortunately for we ‘current humans,’ our generation or ‘model’ has been put on the intellectual fast-track. I think it’s because the game is almost over and this is a power move at the end of the game, but that’s just my opinion.

Our spirits are not only here now, they have been here a number of times in this lifecycle. Our Spirits occupy our human bodies but they are not physical, they are spiritual and move without regard to physical properties. Each generation of life on Earth is like another session (game) of Life on Earth. But it is real and, life has a purpose. The Master has a plan. We are all part of the plan. We are like organic Avatars for our living Spirits.

Again, full transparency, the truth is out there. Floods, Pyramids, Temples, Lost Civilizations, buried and sunken civilizations, millions of people living underground and on cliffs, climate change. It’s all out there, you just need to connect the dots.

I’m not a doctor but I seriously suggest you get a second opinion on my Black Fury theory because it’s going to be kind of a big deal.

I thought the comet Apophis was related to the Black Fury and I’m starting to have my doubts. I think Apophis is related but the relation of it and the black fury is unknown and maybe just a coincidental timeline. In any event, I sense that the increased attention to Apophis is meant to get the population ‘on point’ for the potential of an apocalyptic, end of times event. Apophis chatter will increase in the coming years and rightly so. Whether or not it’s related to the Black Fury has yet to be seen.

Floods - The problem with floods is that they bury as much as they expose. They ‘muddy the waters’ when it comes to scientific scrutiny. The reality is that everything under the surging waters will be destroyed and then the majority will be buried. Washington DC will be the new Atlantis and humans 4000 years from now might dive down to see the White House. That is the level of global change that we will see. The current world is littered with underwater civilizations that seem to be “advanced ahead of their time...” that’s because our primary measure is “rock.” ALL of their worldly possessions, and ours, all be lost forever.

Spy training: “Rapid and widespread decrease in biodiversity on Earth” is code for Back Fury.

Think about it, everything, every animal, plant, mountain and river, will all disappear forever and be replaced with new. It is a complete rebirth of a planet. The Master and his team are probably already hard at work on the next generations models. That really is a long story but, I have my wishes: Catman.

EVERY thing you see today, from Mt Everest to Death Valley, all of it will never exist again after the Black Fury. Enjoy it now.

The Master and his Team have tried all kinds of creatures on this Earth and I can’t wait for my next round of entrants. If they let my Spirit exist in another species, I’m going to lobby to be a Catman, a talking Catman. I have to talk because it’s the only way sarcasm can escape my body.

The Master and Team have tried Centaurs, Dragons and a number of others species over the years. Where's the proof you ask? Where's the proof that anything has ever existed? The only record we have are rocks and fossils. You only find fossils when an organism dies in the mud. There is no trace left of any other organisms that die on land or sea. Just because you can't find evidence does not mean something didn't exist. That is called "faulty logic." If I was a dragon and I was wounded, I'm thinking laying in the mud would be the last thing that I'd want to do.

Fun Fact: The granite terrain and thousands of vertical feet of exposed rock along the Sierra Nevada Mountains are a result of erosion. Biblical floods erode mountains, you can see their magnitude in the terrains of the world. When you observe these geologic features, you have to look on a continental and global scale. These concepts are hard to identify on a smaller, regional scale. Drainage of continents is no different than drainage on a farm, everything flows downhill. Sometimes north and sometimes south, but always down hill.

Much of the terrain in the world is attributed to the shifting of tectonic plates, uplifting, etc. Yosemite is a good example of terrain that is attributed to glacial movement. You can stand in Yosemite Valley and visualize a massive flood. Glaciers are credited with shaping the Sierra, in fact, I think time will prove those Glaciers were in liquid form.

Spy training: "Biblical Flooding" is code for Back Fury. Some people paraphrase this by saying "Heavens Flood Gates will Open..."

I'm drifting off-topic...

Giants - The Master and Team have tried a variety of species during all these life cycles. One of those was the Giants. They had red hair and were 8-10 feet tall. The problem is, someone forgot to provide the giants with food and they started eating all the smaller humans. As you can imagine, it was a disaster. The Giants fled to America in rafts and when they ate the locals, well, that was enough. This happened in what is today the state of Nevada. The Native Nevadans would have none of it. The people in Lovelock tracked them to a cave and then burned them to death. The whole Giant thing didn't work out too well and most of the skeletal remains have reportedly been sold to private parties. There's not a lot of evidence left. The San Diego Giant was discovered in a cave on the west coast of the United States. Giants were 'a thing' back in the day but social media and science have reduced the topic to mythical status. Giants lives mattered.

Giants were real, but they weren't 40 feet tall. Those internet images are meant to discredit the topic of Giants.

Fun Fact: I briefly worked in Nigeria with an Air Traffic Controller from a tribe whose ancestors were cannibals. He was an amazing man and air traffic controller. Our species has come a long way.

Fallon Nevada is home to The Spirit Cave. The Spirit Cave contained skeletal remains of unknown origin. Those remains were repatriated to indigenous peoples and are not subject to public review. The western United States seems to be the geographic epicenter of alien reports. "Unknown Origin" is code for "non human." I don't mean that the indigenous people were non-human. The remains are just so old that they were PRESUMED to be their ancestors remains. The remains are not available for review.

The Master and his Team are not a one-trick pony. Humans or 'homo-sapiens' are just the current model year. Just as with cars, you can have multiple model years on the road at the same time. Well, The Master can have different models on the Earth.

I think right now we're at the very tail end of the overlap with Neanderthals or some similar species. Find a Bigfoot or Yeti and ask them, they'll know for sure. It's not surprising that they live deep in the forest and high in the mountains because they've been hunted to near extinction so humans are to be feared and avoided. It's in their DNA.

Bigfoot - If you use social media, there's a possibility that you've actually seen a Bigfoot, Yeti or 'Giant.' Aliens exist, why in (God)'s name couldn't Bigfoot? The problem is, separating fact from fiction.

Skeletons - Most skeletal remains that we find in archeological digs are from our Earth's current Life Cycle. Older, carbon dated skeletal remains mostly seem to be in caves or some other structure where the body couldn't float away. Those existed in prior Life Cycles of the Earth.

If life on Earth was truly on a linear path year after year for millions of years, the landscape and fauna would look nothing like it does today. Everything on this planet is relatively young. The only vegetation I could find older than the Bristlecone Pine is an Aspen Grove in the western United States that is as old as 80,000 years old. That grove is a root plant that grows underground, it is one of the few plants that can survive the Black Fury. The planet's oldest vegetation is the western United States Mountainous states. This area was likely the first to drain and then repopulate with fauna after the last flood.

Draining of the continents is likely what causes the debris field (shallow coastlines) off the continents. The eastern sides of the continents has the shallowest waters because the amount of debris settling. The Black Fury (Flood) settles as the waters recede back toward the new equator. The debris drifted east last time because as the world starts to spin, the oceans catch up. The debris field is north and east of the exposed lands of North and South America. That trend continues throughout the world.

This next time, when we spin west, the debris will flow and settle west of the continents, in the actual direction of rotation because the ocean will lag behind the planet as rotation resumes. It will eventually catch up and then things settle and life begins. Remember though, the poles will be in different spots so the new equator will be different than the last. Probably similar but a slightly different axis.

I know you want me to get to the aliens and UFOs but as you can see, the end of Life on Earth can be complicated and exhausting.

When the planet slows, the length of days and nights will begin to change. Once that change is perceived by humans, panic and chaos will likely ensue. This book, and the faith in its message, should eliminate that panic. I pray it brings a peaceful end to this Life Cycle of Earth.

Fun Fact: I used to be the FAA Air Traffic Control representative to Burning Man in the Nevada Desert. I picture the end similar to that, a bunch of people living in unity, no money, no government, just peaceful coexistence. This isn't a pitch for Burning Man but I visited there for over a decade. I admired the freedom of those Spirits. It was a celebration of life on Earth not a freak show.

The Black Fury really should put into perspective what the humans species has achieved in this life cycle. I won't preach, but we're kind of a hot mess. Man and the Spirits are knocking it out of the park, the problem is that the Governments and Religions declares war on each other and they use “man” as their weapons.

Strife is unnecessary. Everything of historical or religious significance will all be erased in a very short time. Erased. Our remaining time should be in our Spiritual preparation for the Black Fury.

The Black Fury is simply a regeneration of the Planet Earth and all terrestrial life. The Master and other 'extraterrestrials' species live far beneath the surface and in Ariana. Those areas are immune to the effects of the Black Fury.

Climate change (read: Flood) will occur much more rapidly than is publicly advertised.

The western United States is a classic example of the Black Fury and its power. The entire region is awash with evidence of massive flooding on a global scale. The Sierra Nevada Mountains have been swept clean to the west and into the Pacific Ocean. The eastern Sierra Mountains drained into the Great Basin that finally receded south toward Mexico. If you drive around the western United States you can see these geologic formations in every direction. The mountains have eroded, the region between the mountains and valleys is like river banks, its call A. That debris is called Alluvium. Alluvium is the debris carried down the slopes by water and wind. Some people refer to alluvium as the “foot hills.” Some of those mountains you see were river banks not long ago. Everything you see today will be replaced. Today, stop. And enjoy your view.

The Black Fury has left its foot print all over the planet. Look at things from a global, not regional, perspective. The foot print becomes clear, Pangea was really a thing but it's not as old as science thinks.

Look around you, from the Sahara Desert to Mt. Paektu in North Korea, every thing will soon be under water. The Black Fury will rule the day until life springs anew. It's sad that we won't be here to see it.

I have faith that we will get to witness the Black Fury, as Spirits. Some will witness it as Spirits and hopefully some will witness it from the Arks. Black Furies transform our planet and its population. We are incredibly fortunate to be selected to be here during regeneration. We won't see a lot, but we'll catch the first couple acts.

Hobbits - Well, if you're tinkering with DNA you might as well go 'all in.' The Hobbits of Indonesia probably weren't the only "little people" in the world.

The Black Fury is the end of Life, and the beginning.

If someone told you that you had 5 years to live, how would your Spirit prepare?

2

The Master - It's complicated. Science estimates that there are more species on this planet that we haven't found than the species we have found. That makes the existence of intelligent or other life forms, 'alien' or otherwise, entirely possible.

The Master and his world are foreign to surface humans. They are foreign to us but they may or may not be 'alien.' In reality, they are likely the original inhabitants of Earth. Humans are a divine modification so I think that makes "us" or humans alien. It's all about perspective.

Discussion about 'aliens' tends to focus on a single question: "Are we alone?" IF there is intelligent life, it is probable that there would be multiple species. There may or may not be any relation or contact between any of them. They exist in regions, or realms, or 'dimensions' that we can neither see nor access. Our paths rarely cross.

Remember The Master and his Team? Well, some of them are reported as small in stature, some tall and slender and 'human' looking. In your eyes, that would probably be two species. Some might refer to them as races, similar to humans. After all, we share the same DNA. The aliens would likely show the same amount of variances that you see in the human population. This isn't rocket science, it genetics.

Consider the genetic modifications that humans do to animals. Humans have genetically modified plants, fish and animals. If you can eat it, humans have genetically modified it.

When I said the "they" might look like us... I meant "we" might look like them, because we are them. Look around you. What you see is what they look like. We just don't remember. No one does. We're all just existing in this lifetime until we transition to the next. We live 'one life at a time.'

There should be no reason to think that all life forms would be subject to the same physical effects as humans. Have you ever talked to a cuttlefish? No. Because neither of you can exist in the same place, at the same time. Well, that and you're probably not a cuttle linguist. Sorry, that joke could not be passed up.

Cuttlefish live in atmospheric conditions that humans can not survive. This is common place for many species on the planet. There's no reason to think extraterrestrial life cannot exist deep inside the Earth. That is illogical.

Extraterrestrial life would likely need life support to visit the planets surface. The 'alien beings' that were observed by the elk Hunters near Taos New Mexico were described as having some type of apparatus on their heads. This was likely some type of life support.

Some of the alien life forms seem to be of a non-organic form but they are trying to simulate humans. These are most likely the source of apparition reports from paranormal theorists. These might be the 'shapeshifters' that have been rumored to exist in the American west. Shapeshifters are only mythical because we haven't killed or captured one, it doesn't mean that they don't exist.

These wolf men could be entirely unrelated to The Master and his Team. They are likely inhabitants of the planet that live primarily underground in volcanic terrain. Skinwalker Ranch might have been home of some of these until they either died off or move due to "climate change." Reports of these beings go as far back as the indigenous peoples of North America.

None of those creatures probably have anything to do with The Master or his team. They likely just exist in their own subterranean dimension. If we survive to see the volcanos, some of these things might rise to the surface. DO NOT pet Werewolves.

Don't waste time thinking about bad aliens, your world will never intersect with theirs. Our Spirits will be in Ariana and based on what I saw, it will contain a beauty and splendor like you see in the movie Avatar but more beautiful. There are gems and minerals and elements we can't imagine and that is why they defy description. It's like trying to explain the elements in the Clock Room (Pearly Gates) or (sound) voice of the beings I encountered. More on this later.

As far as the aliens are concerned, I have a challenge and then a request for each of you.

Instead of doubting everything based on your personal beliefs, believe all of it. Unless something can be disproven, it's prudent to assume it's true. If you can't prove otherwise, things are true.

Observe Planet Earth and consider that there are as many as 100 million species, most of them are undiscovered. That in itself opens the door to the possibility of additional occupants of the planet. The beings in Ariana look like humans. The Master looked like an older man. They could introduce one of them into the human population, even at birth. They would evolve as if they were human. They wouldn't even know the difference because their memory is suppressed until they return.

Fun Fact: Air Traffic Control and Spies do the same thing, they 'degauss' magnetic tape recordings to erase the content. Deguassing erases the voice but residual data remains on the tapes. These degassed tapes still contain data, but you need special equipment to retrieve it.

Those 'aliens' in reality, could very well be your wife, your neighbor, you have no idea because we share the same DNA. The human genome is complicated and defies explanation. Well, until just now.

Of the tens of thousands of reports and thousands of testimonials regarding those topics in the past 70 years, of all those reports, if just ONE person was telling "the truth," then aliens are real. There is no debate. This is what we call a "no brainer."

A spy technique is to assume everything that everyone says is true. That applies to every day life too. It helps you discard biases. When you listen to testimonials, reports, sightings, assume every single person is telling the truth. Everything is true unless you can prove otherwise. Analyze every detail of every report, find the commonalities and then form your picture. Some people might say "don't throw out the baby with the bath water."

Do aliens exist? Yes, and it's complicated.

With all this doom and gloom, I almost forgot, you likely won't see any of this at all. The rapidness, or onset of the cataclysm will depend on how fast, or slow, the world slows down before it stops. Most human life will perish early-on with coastal flooding and earthquakes. This will likely be a series of massive scale 'natural' disasters. Humans will perish near the beginning of that. Stories of Floods persist in biblical texts so it does appear that word does spread and get recorded during or after the event.

Back to the aliens. I understand that there are some bad aliens but they only seem to be "bad" if you cross them. Werewolf (aliens) are bad, just take my word for it. There are a lot of folks that have disappeared in the Sierra Nevada mountains with no evidence or remains ever recovered. I suspect some of these might have been related to the Werewolf. Just steer clear. Otherwise, encounters seem relatively benign. What's funny is that some of those aliens are notorious for their smell. The first thing most people notice is the smell.

What is telling about these reports is that the smell is a primary descriptor of the encounter. Even though people are seeing, for the first time, an extraterrestrial creature that defies logic, the "smell" is so rancid that it sticks out in their mind the most.

Smelling a dead body usually results in the same reaction. You'd think the description would start with some type of visual description but the odor is what sticks out in peoples mind the most. They lead with odor... and so does the Werewolf apparently. These beings are between 8-10 feet tall.

Seriously, think about it. A highly trained and educated Park Ranger with years of back country experience tells you he saw a creature or monster of some type and even gives an extremely detailed description. Ummmm, you MIGHT want to listen.

I don't think these 'Werewolves' are alien at all. I think they're just a species nearing extinction. Sort of like the Sphinx, on it's way out. These animals are just the tail end of the Egyptian Anubis, who, like the Sphinx, is probably on it's last (two) legs.

Other Aliens - So far this year there have been reports in Las Vegas Nevada and a Florida mall with tall alien encounters witnessed by numerous people. These are the legit Aliens.

These alien encounters have nothing to do with The Master. These beings and apparitions are not incidental to your human existence. You are ships that (mostly) pass in the night. They are inconsequential.

The Wolfman Alien "Werewolf" reports are not confined to the United States. These type creatures are reported on several continents.

Reports all over the world indicate some type of half man, half canine. It favors its longer rear legs in slower motion but uses all four legs when running. Reports from Mt. Shasta through Yosemite National Park report similar appearances of a creature matching that description. In the Mt. Shasta incident a father and his son clearly saw this creature and then spoke to military type personnel that were in the area armed with weapons. This 'creature' is the type of alien that fits in the 'bad' category. Think about it, after all these years, the mystery is solved, the Werewolves are real... who knew?

Oh, Yosemite Park Rangers. They knew, and they didn't even know it! They thought it was an animal because guess what, that's what Park Rangers do. They are conditioned (educated) to think in terms of “animal.” This is how facts morph into myths. Since it’s unlike any animal they’ve ever seen, it gets discounted as fantasy or tale. If a Park Ranger told you there was a Mountain Lion around the corner I bet you’d believe them.

The good news is, the werewolf, Anubis or whatever animal it is hasn’t shown a lot of hostility during encounters. The bad news is, the size of these things means that if you angered it, you probably wouldn’t stand a chance. Don’t make noise in the dark.

These animals STINK!. Don’t take my word for it, research the subject. I just did you a favor and consolidated the key points. These Wolf men could be the product of The Master but based on the description of their odor, their stench sounds “out of this world.” Maybe ‘Alien?’ I think it’s just another species that’s being discontinued, like an antique car.

Summary: Werewolves are real and oh yeah, they STINK!

Fun Fact: The U.S. Marines conduct combat and survival training very close to Yosemite. One of their classes is about confined space warfare. These combat tactics are used fighting in caves or other confined spaces, subways, buildings, etc. While the proximity of the base and the activity might be coincidental, the tactics used would be logical to use on hostile life living underground. Fortunately for us, not all ‘aliens’ are bad guys.

I’m not saying they’re engaged in Werewolf combat but it is a notable piece of the ‘alien’ puzzle.

Conspiracy Theories

3

Let's use Archuleta Mesa or Dulce, New Mexico as a case study on conspiracy.

Dulce is the site of the (reported) underground encounter with hostile aliens during a tunneling operation back in the early 1979. Remember, don't presume that's a lie, presume it's true unless you can prove otherwise. The man that reported it also displayed actual wounds that coincided with his account. His entire story is plausible but it's hard to decipher because it was so filled with emotion and anti-governmental rhetoric. It was an unfortunately unsuccessful plea for help.

The Dulce incident was so inflamed in emotion that it seemed devoid of tangible proof. If you listen to it thoroughly and separate the emotion and supposition from the details, you can read the tea leaves. From the injuries to the stories details, the plausibility of it is so real that it is more than likely true.

The irony is that the 'whistleblower,' Phil Schneider seemed completely comfortable with alien existence. He and his father were part of the team that had one observing during testing of the Atomic bombs. But when Phil encountered THIS particular species, he was immediately taken aback because they were hostile. He was neither accustomed to that nor was he likely briefed on the possibility of an encounter. It could be that whomever let him down there assumed that he was familiar with this species. Well, Phil and one other man were the only ones to make it out alive from the sounds of things. Those deceased silent warriors are known only to The Master and I suspect we'll see them again soon. Their Spirits are not dead, they probably walk among us today, possibly among their very own families. Life on Earth is complicated, and cosmic.

I was never part of any of that type of operation but I know how the government works. The Dulce story is in complete alignment with a Black Operation.

The Dulce Base is reported to have seven levels. The area would be a very small footprint of underground compared to the larger Ark system. This base is likely somehow linked to the Ark network.

The conspiracy theory for the top level, level 1, is that it is for security and communications. Well, that's normal, its a controlled entry point. I've been in a lot of military bunkers, that's standard stuff.

The conspiracy theory for level 2 is for human staff housing. Again, normal and logical. Nothing secret or cosmic. Even Area 51 has dorm rooms for employees. Heck, the Director of NSA has a suite that resembles a nice condominium for an office complete with a dining room. This is just normal stuff but the public rarely see's it.

Fun Fact: My girlfriend filled in for the Admirals secretary when she was on leave. Unlike the CIA and FBI , NSA is a military organization. It is not ‘real’ accessible by legislators. They might get a tour, they will not get ‘access.’

The conspiracy theory for level 3 is for executives and labs. Well, that’s also normal stuff. The labs won’t look normal but operationally, that’s a logical design concept. Nothing cosmic.

The conspiracy theory for level 4 is that it is for “mind control experiments.” Mind control is a broad term. Telepathy and remote viewing were buzz words back in the day. I suspect that this is just the advancement of that research. It would probably blow your mind what they can do but that point is moot. It will never, affect you.

The conspiracy for level 5 is that it is for alien housing. Well, if we have some, I want them on level 5 or deeper. These won’t be ‘the good ones.’ These will be beings or creatures that defy comprehension, they may or may not be alive. Nothing too cosmic, it’s just an effective method of studying and storing organisms that could be harmful to our species. I’ve never seen any evidence or heard testimony that the U.S. is working “with” aliens. This facility would be impenetrable by manmade weapons.

Fun Fact: From a geographic perspective, Dulce is almost exactly where the U.S. set off the underground nuclear bomb in Project Gasbuggy in 1967.

The conspiracy for level 6 is genetic experiments. Well, the activities in level 7 need certain subjects to study. The military, Eisenhower, Truman and Byrd all believed that humanity will end with the Black Fury. They are scrambling for survival techniques.

One option would be fleeing to another planet but that’s impractical. Some sort of cryogenic storage process would likely be required. Well, I think level 6 and 7 are tackling this challenge. The site of it would likely make you vomit. There would be creatures and organisms in various states of development and decay. This is some of the reason you don't see Black and Grey Operations in the military. The public would not further, but only hinder the process.

Yes, animals die so humans can live in Black Ops medical training. Can you imagine what we do if we're trying to master cryogenic firkin storage of organic flesh?!?! It makes ME want to vomit.

I've never been to Dulce, seen Dulce or been privy to the complex. Publicly available information is plentiful enough for most people to research the issue and form an educated opinion on its validity.

The Black Fury would probably not affect the base. I've been on many cave tours in my life and they seem to repeat the same mantra, 'under ground is the safest place to be in an earthquake.' The energy from a quake is primarily manifested on the surface of the Earth, not below. These massive Earthquakes will challenge that paradigm but the concept is sound. Under ground is safer than above. Vibrations and frequencies, well, that's a whole other book.

We can't all leave the planet but I'll be we have a pretty robust presence in space orbiting the Earth. Our Spirits come and go, I have every intention of being part of the coming generations and by that time I suspect our species will be traveling to and from space routinely. My Spirits next 'movie' is going to be space-based, I can feel it in my soul.

My life has been incredible and filled with unbelievable fortune and experiences and I see no reason that has to stop now.

Government

4

I have worked exclusively within the Executive Branch of the United States Government, first in the military and then in the Department of Transportation. I worked as uniformed military and then a civilian. I fully understand the politics of government.

The government is a tangled web of organizations, some elected, some appointed, some hired. It's complicated I wouldn't expect a civilian without government service to comprehend the nuances to the "United States Government."

The public facing government is the one you see on television. They are elected officials that represent the citizens of a state. They are the military you see at war. The public appearance is that the legislative body of the government 'runs the show.' That is political theatrics. The military is a different animal, they are charged with the security of the Nation. Politics has an impact on the military effectiveness but it has no effect on military capability.

The government really has no knowledge of UFOs, aliens or the end of times. Further, I cannot envision those topics would ever be released to a states elected official.

The military would hold the pieces to this puzzle, very few military. No one would have the whole picture except a very few generals. The Secretary of Defense would likely be the only civilian to know and that would only happen when it is time.

Fun Fact: Our Secretary of Defense has had some very strange unexplained and highly publicized absences lately. His absence is attribute to cancer and complications. Despite all of that, the man remains on the job. He and a very few others baer the weight of the world. They have my complete Admiration. This is my gift to them.

People tend to use the terms “military” and “government” interchangeably. That misconception is the source of much misunderstanding. Elected officials will receive all the pomp and circumstance deserving of the position they hold, but access to information and technologies is limited.

Keep in mind, the military keeps you safe by possessing technology that exceeds the capabilities of public technology. You should read a lot into that. If they had access to only those systems that the public uses, well, you wouldn't be very safe.

And here's the rub, only a little portion of the military knows about that technology. Those with a need to know. The silent military. Over time, that technology becomes common and it's leached out to the public through industries. Things like the Global Positions System (GPS) or Satellite Photos, those technologies used to be military secrets. Over time, those technologies get released because they're simply outdated in the military. “Outdated” is code for “we invented something better.”

The visible military, the ones you see dropping bombs and delivering aid don't even have access to all the good stuff. They get cool stuff, not super cool stuff. Black Operations get super cool stuff. Grey Operations...? Well, as you can imagine, they are next level! There are clearances, accesses and levels that prevents anyone from having all the pieces of the puzzle. Elected officials will be inspired and awed, but never fully informed about military operations. Legislators affect your livelihood, not your security.

The military machine is augmented by the Department of Energy and the National Laboratories. The U.S. Military is a mighty force that is as more complex than the civilian government. It is not all guns, planes, ships and satellites. It is technology at a level that you can only imagine because if you're a SyFy fan, you'll see it in movies. It's been decades since I was deep inside the Black Community, I have no expectation that anything has changed. The military of the United States possesses the most advanced technology on the planet.

Fun Fact: President Eisenhower's farewell speech to the world in 1961 warned about the establishment of a Military Industrial Complex. I think that cemented Military versus Civilian control over the military. The Military Industrial Complex became the Department of Defense. General Eisenhower was an amazing human, really.

When you think of technology you probably think of computers and wireless devices. The military and the Department of Energy, specifically the National Laboratories, possess technologies that you'll see reflected in movies as science fiction. Many are real, you just don't know which ones.

You're probably wondering "How can I write this?" Surely these programs are all classified, this is top secret stuff! Well, if true, some of it is classified but since I've never been "read in" or "briefed," I haven't been privy to any of the details. I likely have some of the fine details wrong. Some archeologist or paleontologist might find flaws in the timeframe or specific details. The big picture, the Cycle of Life, the existence of aliens, UFOs, is supported by science and testimonials. Use your internet, access social media and find your own truth. Stop assuming everything is a lie.

Social media is not just popular apps where people post themselves doing amazing things. Social media is the process of permitting public input to a world wide database of information. This essentially allows humans to share and exchange information and expand their knowledge on an almost unrestricted level. We can communicate globally on ideas and concepts.

This story is an example of information exchange using social input to the world wide web.

Use that database to form your own opinion. Research all of these topics, the truth is out there. I'm able to distinguish fantasy from fiction from a different perspective. This story is my perception. Yours might differ, good.

How can I write this? Simple, it's my destiny. Yes, I've signed dozens of Non-Disclosure Agreements (NDAs), but this story is so over the top that no one would likely object to it because it's unbelievable. It is, in fact, what some people have been praying for. Some very 'important' or as I see it, 'influential' people.

Everything of a highly classified nature in the government is compartmentalized. Projects and information is assigned code names usually based on the source of the information. If something was spotted on a spy satellite it would be classified as Secret or Top Secret but it would be appended with a code word like "Talent Keyhole" which indicated the source was satellite imagery. This is how they keep things secret, or private. No one with a Top Secret satellite clearance could see it unless that person has “TK” access. That is how the government and military keep things secret. Fragmented, separate pieces of the puzzle. Very few people ever have “the big picture.” It’s all a big puzzle but if you organize the pieces, you see the big picture.

Information is never released based on a persons “position” or “rank.”

There are three main topics in this story, the End of Life, the existence of alien life and UFOs and then the existence of underground Arks. Any one person working in any of these fields would not have a clue about the other topics. Someone working on a UFO project would have no idea that the Black Fury is even ‘a thing’ unless they did some research. And even then, you’ve have to BELIEVE the information that you discover. You have to separate fact from fiction to reveal the truth. Most people can’t successfully do that because they lack the life experiences.

My life experiences are different than yours so I’m sharing.

Again, this story, theory and concept are so far “over the top” that it’s just unbelievable. I wonder what Moses thought when The Master told him there would be a flood and he had to build this crazy huge Ark... Obviously The Master didn’t NEED Moses to build an Ark. I think this was a test of Human will, testing the resolve of humans.

A person working on the Arks wouldn’t have a clue about aliens, UFOs and especially the Black Fury. Those details are probably known only to a few uniformed military personnel. I am not a betting man but if I were, I’d place money on the bet that says even the President of the United States doesn’t know what you now know. Aliens are real, the Earth is coming to an end and there are Arks for human survival deep within the Earth. That's a bit much right!?!? It's probably more than you thought you'd learn in this lifetime. Yet, here we are.

You're probably wondering how all of this can be hidden from public view, let alone hidden from the people in the 'visible military.' Well, it's easier than you think because access to the information and facilities is compartmentalized. The Arks are likely referred to as some type of "continuation of government" project. Arks would use the same or similar designs and be located across the continent to enhance the chances of survival. There is no guarantee an Ark will survive they will have redundant systems.

A person working on a Top Secret Ark program in the Appalachian Mountains would have no idea that a group in New Mexico could be building a similar structure. Everyone would think that they hold the world's biggest Secret. In reality, they have just a tiny portion of the picture, the Ark. They might not know this 'Ark' has a real-world purpose. It's not just a contingency shelter. It is very easy to mask the truth.

Many of these people are reading this and thinking exactly what you're thinking... "What the... WHAT?"

The same goes for National Laboratories. People are probably working on projects that they have no idea are intended for the survival of the human race. They probably even question "why" is it we're working on some of these projects? WHY does a tunnel entrance at thousands of feet above sea level need entrances that can withstand nuclear blasts and are water tight?

Another reality is that once you are underground, you have no concept of where you are. If you don't know how fast you travel, you could be anywhere, any depth, any area. This ‘solid’ rock of a planet is a matrix of underground structures.

Many people have toured caves and everyone has heard of the mining industry. Underground constructions offers challenges but there are benefits to the efficiency of space. it’s a series of tunnels and chambers spread laterally and vertically. The advantage of building underground is the availability of vertical and horizontal space.

The underground facilities that the government used to use for continuity of government are now open for civilian tours. That proves that their replacement facilities are already ready, you (and they) just don’t know where they are. Honestly, neither do the legislators. They will be briefed in at the appropriate time and not a second before. Why? Timing. We don’t know when this is all going to happen. I speculate that it is within five years. Only a few uniformed (military) people probably know the date. I cannot imagine the weight of that knowledge.

Fun Fact: I was briefed on evacuation orders from NSA in case of, well, ‘catastrophe,’ and those orders did not include any type of underground route.

Bonus fun fact: The basement of NSA had lines painted on the middle of the floor so you didn’t get run over with the robotic train. That is how antiquated the robots were, they couldn’t even see humans yet. That’s tongue and cheek and true.

“How can they hide this from the President?!” Well, no one is hiding anything. The President is only given factual information. The President is probably briefed on continuity of civilization and government plans and preparations. But in his mind, that is just a contingency. He would have no idea the scope.

The President would likely have no idea of that the Black Fury is real. Presidents Nixon and Kennedy had some serious rumored security breaches during their administrations. I think that pretty much closed the door on civilian access to that level of information.

Classified information is declassified once it is made public. I suspect that your elected officials will be briefed at the same time you are. It will be a world wide broadcast on all media. You will all be “in the same boat” from that point on. Life will never be the same. It will be a new world order, order that the civilian government does not provide. Those words may resonate negatively with some but they should not. The efficiency of the military will make civilians marvel at their accomplishments. It will be as if you’ve entered the space age over night.

Spy Planes are an example of how even an unclassified program can still be shrouded in mystery. Arks will be like that. You see them, you know they exist, but you have no idea what they are capable of doing. This is compartmentalization.

I don’t sense that the aliens are ‘helping’ us with anything. I think The Master and his Team are opening our intellectual potential but I see no evidence that they’re “helping” humans achieve anything other than survival techniques.

If the U.S. were working ‘with’ aliens we would not be reverse engineering the reported UFOs that we have in our possession. I suspect we have a dozen vehicles, all of which likely use different technologies. If we were ‘working with’ aliens they would have emailed us the owners manuals.

None of this matters, not even the Black Fury because you (and I) are eternal. We exist in our Spirit world after this organic life. Some people might say that “we are the aliens” and, based on your perspective, that is true. You, the you that you feel, not the you that you see, will outlive all of that nonsense.

Don't worry about the ‘aliens’ or UFOs. That's real stuff but it won't affect your life or ‘rebirth.’ It is just an aspect of this world that exists in a different region or ‘dimension’ from humans.

This information is all public, it's just disguised and spread so vastly that most people probably don't connect the dots. Well, I connect dots unlike a lot of people. Half of my schooling years were spent in the school hallway being tutored or counseled. I think I have a form of logic or learning dyslexia because I have a habit of processing information differently than many people. Every thing I've ever thought seems to be reality, it's just that some of it hasn't happened yet. How cool is that?!?!

Personally, my belief is that the government got into my head during my intellectually formative years. In a manner of speaking, I am a product of their making.

Many people in this world live only within their birth region. They never get out and see the world. My Spirit has the intellectual equivalent of a sweet tooth. It has always been “on the go.” Once I retired and settled, my brain equalized like a swirling ocean. All my thoughts started to coalesce and organize. My encounter with a ‘Clock Room’ was the binder that put everything in life into perspective. This story is my story and it is a true story. I don't have every single detail because the story isn't over. I've filled in the blanks with the most plausible explanations.

I'll end this part here. I could fill a book with my life experiences and given time, maybe I will.

This is not about me. I didn't even use my real name as an author. This is about a message. A message about the world as I see it. Your view is probably different and perhaps now your view will morph as you ponder the possibilities that I describe.

Life is short, shorter than science would have you believe. Tackle every day and every deed as if it's your last. I don't know when the Black Fury will happen, I don't want to know. We won't see much of it, it is just a phase of life on Earth. This isn't your first rodeo and it probably won't be your last. Those people that you 'lost' during your life, they are closer than you realize. Some are with you today. Some might say "they walk among us." You just don't know it because you don't recognize their new body. Some people are lucky enough to run into a lost Spirit in a different human body. They are blessed.

Their Spirit is real and so is yours. The splendor that awaits you really does defy description. What's crazy is that I'm not a cryer and I just cried as I wrote that sentence because I can't adequately convey to you the magnitude of awesomeness that awaits us. Religions call for 'faith' in a greater power. I never really had faith as I was raised a Christian but now I have absolute conviction. I am not a religious person. By definition I am a Deist. I know there is a higher power but the religion couldn't answer my questions.

My mother encourage me to attend Church but most importantly, she urged me to find my own path and my own truths. Well, like most things in life, I went overboard. My Spirit honestly feels that time is getting short so it's important just to get this story out there.

My only intention with this story is to reduce, if not eliminate, the suffrage of the human species at the end of this Life Cycle. I don't know when, but the end will come. When it does, and that wall of water is approaching and blocking the sun, your first thought will be "God DAM IT!" But it will be vain.

It won't matter, your fate is sealed. It always has been. This isn't our first rodeo and it won't be our last. We're all in this together, I don't know about you, but I think that's pretty cosmic!

Spirits go on when organic life ends, THAT is the only message you need.

5

I am probably one of the most qualified individuals in the entire world to make this statement: nearly every UFO report is either a balloon, a rocket, a missile, an aerial vehicle or an x-plane being controlled by a ‘government’ entity.

The “flying tic tac” is just another one of those tests. I used to field those inquiries all the time, from within the military, industry and from the public. The FAA Public Affairs guy is literally on my speed dial. That ‘Tic Tac’ story snowballed out of the Navy’s control because someone didn’t talk to the right people. Well, now it’s legendary. All that nonsense is conspiratorial white noise.

Aerial operations are not limited to the military. Even some people in the military don’t realize that Intelligence agencies have reconnaissance assets separate from combat assets. Different missions demand different platforms, it’s that simple.

I recall a conversation years ago when we were comparing communications intercept capabilities. The design guys told me that they could already make a platform the size of a fly, the limiting factor was an adequate power source. That conversation took place over three decades ago, I’ll bet money they conquered that problem. The CIA has used a number of birds, live and mechanical in the past for reconnaissance. I'm sure that they've graduated to insects by now.

Have you seen the robotic animals on the internet? Those are the products of publicly accessible technologies. Just imagine what the classified programs are capable of. I suspect that they have the capability to mask the difference between organic beings and mechanical robots.

People with Top Secret Clearances that fly billion dollar airplanes cannot stand the fact that there are things happening around them that they are not aware of. That frustration is a by-product of the compartmentalization of information.

When people get high level clearances it sometimes has the psychological effect that 'they' should know everything, after all, you're "cleared." No, you still only know what you 'need to know,' not what you would 'like' to know. F-22 being flown by pilots with Top Secret Clearances don't fly over Area 51 for a variety of reasons, that is how secrets stay secret.

One method of eliminating the military rank influences between the Black and Intelligence Communities from the 'visible military' was the absence of uniforms and grooming standards. A colonel might have a hard time hearing what an enlisted person has to say but they'll listen intently to a PhD candidate from Indiana Christian University (ICU). They'll also listen to a software engineer more intently than a soldier.

There is no malice in that deception. It is simply a reality of trying to perform jobs that don't always work within military hierarchy.

Anyone that's ever held a very high level clearance knows one thing for certain, you do not, and will not, know everything. It is a lifestyle. You don't even bother wondering about those 'other things.' As a sweet Spirit on the internet once said... "Ain't nobody got time for that."

It is amazing the increase of efficiency when you work in an environment where every thing, every piece of information, has a classification level. Your brain functions differently because very little of that data is subject to recall like your normal thoughts by your brain. This sounds technical but it's really not. You cannot roam the halls (or office) and socialize because you don't have a 'need to know' what other people are working on and it is always classified.

6

As all this unfolds the human population will be split into Spirits going to Heaven and survivors in the Arks. The Arks are a fascinating subject with almost limitless potential.

Selection and operation will be crucial. I have faith that the military and science are collaborating. Most of them wouldn't even realize it.

Nearly 50 years ago the United States patented nuclear subterrenes for use as tunneling (boring) machines. In plain language, the military sometimes refers to this as "transportation excavation" or other terminology that effectively masks the real meaning. Remember, I used to write Presidential briefs, I was trained to communicate in terminology that communicates but protects aspects of the communication. This training has interfered with my personal and professional life for decades. My brain processes as my mouth speaks and they don't always send the same message, that is the main reason that I'm writing this story. I've tried to explain these concepts to people but I lose them, every time.

It's not that they don't care, I just have a hard time expressing it logically. When I transitioned from the Black Community to Air Traffic Control I rejoined the 'visible' military. I had a hard time. I would attend courses and frequently disagree with what I call ‘contemporary airmen.’ These are the ‘normal people’ that you meet from the military. Just like when I was in grade school I would get called into the hallway or into an office for some “reorientation.” Bosses hated to love me, but they loved me.

I’ve never seen or been in an ‘Ark’ but I have worked in bunkers and tunnels so I’m fairly familiar with the concept. Once you’re in there, you lose perspective of where you are. You can put a TV screen on a wall a wall and you can have the perception that you’re staring out a window or even looking out of a spaceship into space. You see what the designers want you to see. Your ‘world’ is completely manipulatable. It’s an amazing concept because anything and everything is possible You know the holograms that you see in the movies, those aren’t necessarily fictional and the technology is already public. The technology has been around for decades and is called virtual and augmented reality.

Aircraft simulators are a good example of this. If you close your eyes and were transported into a simulator of a modern Boeing or Airbus, you would think you were actually flying. All the sensations are there because you are actually moving. It is incredibly easy to manipulate a persons environment. Your Ark life will be intended for long-term survival. I assure you, at some very deep level, deep within the Earth, the military has prepared an impressive array of facilities that will sustain a level of life that will blow your mind.

Noah built an Ark of wood. Humans built the Great Wall of China, Pyramids and Temples. Can you imagine what we’ve been able to accomplish in decades of boring underground with nuclear subterrenes? It is likely of ‘Cosmic’ proportion.

I don’t know how they’ll load the Arks but since this is a military operation, I surmise that they would have adopted a scientific approach to the selection of people. This won't be (God) picking people, there will be some type of controlled boarding or loading. I have absolutely no experience in that area so I can't really envision that aspect.

I can absolutely envision a regionalized, perhaps even at the state level of access portals into the underground network. That network would have a series of stops or separation of areas that could be sealed off from each other should one section fail.

Rumors about Deep Underground Military Bases or "DUMBs" are likely the public identity of these Arks. People talk about Dulce New Mexico and an underground base there. There is an area called Archuleta Mesa that people rumor is the site of a secret alien base. This location is where the infamous confrontation between soldiers and aliens. As many as 60 soldiers lost their lives in an underground firefight. Far fetched, not really.

You can administratively shield how and where people die and under what circumstances. "Classified mission." I'm not saying the military did this, I'm saying that it is possible. You could say the some died in a bombing overseas. Some may have died in a plane crash. The reality is that deployments are often classified so people aren't always aware of where their loved ones are working, serving or dying.

Fun Fact: Dulce New Mexico and the Archuleta Mesa are on the Navajo Nation in the Southwestern United States. The United States exploded an underground nuclear bomb near Dulce named Operation Gasbuggy in 1967. That was one of a series of underground nuclear bombings in the southwestern United States that were part of the Plowshare Project. The public story was that these tests were for the peaceful use of nuclear explosions.

I was a Korean linguist so I can say with near certainty the governmental translation of “a peaceful use of nuclear explosions” is synonymous with “the beginning of a transportation excavation project.” Some people might use the term “Ark.” If I was a civilian intelligence analyst, that would be my intelligence summary from what I see publicly on the internet.

Fun Fact: I once took a leak into the Sedan Crater at the Nevada Test Site. The crater is very remote and there was nowhere else to go... The Sedan Crater is the largest crater ever created by a nuclear explosion in the world. It is two hours north of Las Vegas.

If you have a loved one that works in combat, combined spaces, deployments, etc. hug them. You know NOT what they do. Some of them might not even realize the magnitude of what they're doing. The people that do realize what they're doing might not be able to emotionally cope with it and withdraw from their families and society. Military personnel (uniformed and civilians) all make sacrifices. Some dedicate their lives for humanity and can never tell their life experiences. They are a sort of angel that you will never understand until your Spirit is reborn.

Archuleta Mesa is the source of many alien and conspiracy theories. Theories abound but one thing is for certain. The 'base' or facilities would be thousands of feet underground. Access is likely only available by underground transport. There will be very limited access points and those will always be highly guarded. The main entrances to these areas are called “portals,” because they are an entrance to the Earth. Portal is a common tunneling term because it is technically a passage between the dimensions of above ground and below ground. When things exist in a “different dimension,” that doesn't indicate that they're far away, they are in a different 'place.' This nuance has invaluable use when communicating about a topic. When you hear “dimension” and “portal” you should not discard that information as fantasy.

Tunneling is a misunderstood concept. The Earth is anything but a solid mass. It is a cosmic body that contains micro universes. Each and every species basically lives in its own kingdom. The fish in the pond exists with or without humans. The snakes in the jungle will survive regardless of human existence. The world right in front of you is learned so we tend to overlook the obvious. Once we learn something a lot of people move on to the next subject. Learning can unfortunately stymie thought.

Unlike being in the ocean or a body of water, when you tunnel you’re boring into an often solid surface. Visit a tunnel like Carlsbad Caverns. If that was underwater, you couldn’t exist inside there. The pressure of the water would compress your body, the environment would not sustain human life without life support. The cave isn’t filled with water. It is open air and the space is open to the surface above so the pressure has been equalized. The result is a very comfortable, if not chilly and slightly damp environment where many species have adopted as their homes.

Arks would be just like modern caves BUT they will be decorated where you have no sensation that you are in a cave. Those spaces will be designed and decorated in a way that will make you unaware that you are underground. The Nuclear Subterrenes are capable of creating these tunnels with almost no debris. The excavated material is melted to form the walls and add strength to the tunnel. These tunnels could be stitched together and connected like building blocks.

Design depends on how tightly you stack and pack them. The Internet shows that if every person in the world were housed in one area, all eight billion people would fit inside the state of Texas. If you made two layers, we would all fit in an area half the size of Texas. You can quickly surmise, housing all these people might actually be plausible, not impossible. I cannot imagine trying to house the entire world, that is simply unimaginable. I think the masses will perish early on, the Arks will be revealed somewhere in the process where society has succumbed to the reality of the Black Fury.

The complicating issue is the speed of spread of the Fury. It will be massive and it will be cataclysmic, but the duration of onset and timing is the big unknown. I live every day as though it's my last. Ask anyone I know, if there's something that I want to do, I do it. I put off chores and tasks like most people tend to do but if there is something in life that I want to experience, I am the "all in" guy.

My family has borne the brunt of my Spirits explorative nature and for that, I am eternally grateful. One day they will know that. Their Spirits weren't always ready for the adventures that my Spirit was taking them on. Now that things have settled and we've stopped moving, things are settling like the Ocean. It's time to enjoy life.

This Ark process is going to be like a Black Swan event. A Black Swan event is one that you remember vividly, it's life changing. It's the atomic bombing of nation, it's September 11th, it's the moment your perception of life changes forever. It is a realization that life is now different than you ever thought it would be. When this happens, it will be like a flock of Black Swans. It will make COVID seem like a chest cold. This period for man will be the most trying and dangerous period of our lives, literally.

No war, no cancer, no money. Nothing that you consider of "substance" will matter any more. Most of us will organically 'perish' and many will be loaded into Arks. The only outcome that I'm absolutely positive about is the eternal existence of our Spirits.

My Out of Body experience provided me that level of conviction. You don't have that same conviction so until then faith is your only real alternative.

The truth will be know one day though and when that day comes, you'll be on the inside track since you have read this story. Ahhhh, you're welcome.

This is my story and it's true. It's my life movie and I'm the star. Whether or not you believe in any of it is entirely up to you, it doesn't matter because your Spirit is going where my Spirit is going. I think that all Sprint's go to heaven. There are no evil Spirits, there are evil deeds. I believe our purpose in life is filtering out those evil deeds so they don't make it to Heaven. Evil deeds are a product of man, Spirits are a product of ((God)). Your Spirit is eternal.

Arks and space share similar environmental challenges for human existence. Imagine the amount of research that we've conducted through the space program, national laboratories, etc. in the past seven decades on these challenges. And most of this is being done right under the eyes of the public. University study is for civilians. The military has advanced 'universities' people will never see.

The founding fathers of the Arks are likely Admiral Byrd, President Truman and President - General Eisenhower (Ike). Within a decade of Admiral Byrds return from Antarctica the United States was fully engaged in subterranean construction. In the decades since, their progress is probably awe inspiring. There will be areas and spaces of epic size and proportion that will appear as though it's a fantasy movie. I wish I could see it all but I think I'm destined to be up top for the big show, the Black Fury.

7

Antarctica is an enigma of a continent. The area is rumored to be the entrance to the world, the access point that ‘aliens use.’ The continent is accessible but it is so vast that it’s unknown to most except the military.

“Hollow Earth” theories believe that there is a portal somewhere there. Well, I didn’t attend camouflage school but masking something in Antarctica doesn’t seem like rocket science. It’s white. Not all white, but it’s like the White Fury of camouflage.

The contents and composition of the continent are not public knowledge. Numerous countries have treaties to operate on Antarctica but military weapons and activities are not allowed. Effectively, that entire center of the continent, and area larger than the state of New Mexico, is shielded from public observation and view.

Spy Training: In Antarctica, ‘science’ and ‘military’ can often be hard to differentiate.

The fact that the United States deployed an armada of warships to Antarctica just months after the end of World War II should be a sign of the continent's significance to the world.

I don’t know what happened down there, maybe Hitler fled Germany. Maybe countries were trying to stake claim to the territory. I don’t believe any of it. The war had just ended and all the world's population was recovering. Japan was still smoldering, sunken ships hadn't even began to rust. And yet, the United States decides to send an aircraft carrier group of 14 ships to Antarctica for an observatory science mission?!?! I'm not sure who was working in Public Relations (PR) when they came up with that cover story.

Fun Fact: One of my favorite PR guys in the government is from Canada. Canada really does produce some amazing Spirits. If my movie ever made it to film, Ryan Reynolds would play me.

Operation High-jump was labeled a scientific mission but they weren't looking for penguins. It was labeled 'scientific' as a cover story for something. The military found out about Antarctica, likely from a German communications intercept at the tail end of World War II. I can only speculate as to what they were looking for. It was not research, it was an operational military mission of some kind. Many countries dispatched militaries and vessels to the continent in that decade. The infusion of nationalities resulted in most of the nations signing the Antarctic Treaty in 1959 to set parameters for operations on the continent. Military activity is 'banned.' It might be more accurate to say "overt military activity" is banned.

Antarctica and the moon are mysteries that I intend to research as a Catman.

I was literally trained at how to establish a cover story. The ones about Antarctica.... Suck. It's almost as bad as "Atoms for Peace" and Project Plowshare. From the "Tic Tac UFO" to the "peaceful use of atomic bombs," it is a Public Relations charade or 'spin.' They're telling you the truth, but the truth is not what you assume. They use your assumptions as a weapon.

Some people speculate that Science Fiction movies are a method of desensitizing the public and opening their minds to the possibilities of cataclysmic events. Hmm? I thought it was just ‘uncanny’ that they all movie have a similar theme. Different subjects but same message. Weird right?!?!?

Fun Fact: I love SyFy movies especially those centered on space travel but I have never seen a whole Star Wars movie.

One thing that is more powerful than the Atomic Bomb is communication.

Communication Can Weaponize Information

The End of Times

8

Picture the planet Earth. A blue marble floating in space in a counterclockwise rotation. It's a spinning top.

As the Earth begins to slow, the appearance slowly transforms from blue to grey. Water spreads towards the edges of the planet as all land disappears. Volcanic soot and debris starts to fill the atmosphere until the planet and atmosphere both appear black from space.

Underneath it all, the core of the Earth, the Powerful Core starts to rotate in the other direction. From the center of the Earth outward toward the crust. Everything starts rotating west until everything again synchronizes.

Over a short time, the Earth's rotation stabilizes in a westerly motion. The waters recede towards the Earth's new belly which reveals a new landscape across the globe.

The atmosphere begins to clear and at some point, the sun breaks through the atmosphere and a small sprout springs from the ground. The atmosphere shapes the new world.

The seed begins to vibrate and the The Master and his Team rise from the surface and begin to repopulate the Earth.

The earth is now a full-blown garden. It is paradise. As The Masters Team unloads his passengers, the very first passenger off the ship is a Catman who can speak! The creatures in back of the ship, the ones wearing the names tags “Adam” and “Eve.” Well, this time they can wait their turn.

The Master will instruct the inhabitants on the new world order.

Fun Fact: Venus and Uranus both rotate to the west. Isn't this a kick in Uran...? Never mind, we're getting off topic.

The Clock Room

9

The binding event that cemented my perspective and perception of events was my trip to the Clock Room. I have had a lot of memorable experiences in life but this was the event to stop all other events.

It was an out of body experience that I attribute to possible sleep apnea in 2017. I think this because I woke up with a gasp. When I dream, not only do I remember my dreams, I control what happens in them because I am completely aware that I'm dreaming. I also occasionally lucid dream, this experience was like that.

It wasn't a dream. It wasn't an abduction. It was an out-of-body experience in my sleep. I awoke into an area that reminded me of an airport terminal. Like a super chill airport, not a people rushing around and TSA tickling your privates airport.

This was a black space with no dimensions but you could sense there was an absolute sense that things were happening here. No noise, just me kind of floating along trying to figure out, what in the wide world of sports is happening!?!?

The one thing that caught my eye the most is this gift shop type area on the side of the passageway. Again, it's black but you sense a passageway. This room had these amazing devices that were suspended in the air. They were primarily made of gold but the jewels, ornaments and construction were amazingly beautiful It was apparent that whatever these jewels were, I had never seen anything like it. They were the size of those lights on the side of your garage, and the shape was similar. What attracted me to them was the intricacy of construction and their beauty. There was no sign of anything that dealt with time, symbols or anything. But there was the absolute sense that these things dealt with time. I didn't count them but I think there were about a dozen.

I was so attracted to these things that I went into that room. I sensed that maybe I wasn't supposed to but I couldn't resist the beauty. These things were so amazing that my singular thought was "I don't know what 'heaven' is but I'm good right here, for eternity. I couldn't even conceive of a more beautiful sight so I was content to stay there forever.

Well, just like me, I probably wondered a little far and there were these two things that approached me. I kid you not, it was almost like museum security, it's like authority but no threat. Sorry museum guards, you just don't scare me.

Anyway, these things had no real physical form. It was almost like Casper the ghost floating in the room, just translucent enough to tell where they are but no real distant shape.

I don't recall exactly what was said but I vividly remember that they made a sound, like a gentle, super mellow descending tone that threw me into the most relaxed state that I have ever experienced. It was as though someone had just poured warm oil all over your upper body and it was just oozing down but not on your skin, all over your organs, warming and calming you at the same time. I was so relaxed and overcome with joy that I started to pray that I'd never have to leave. I mean that, I would forgo "heaven" for wherever this was.

One thing I recall is that the entire experience was devoid of negative emotion. There was not one negative thing about the experience. Sure, I love my family. But the experience was so filled with joy, my only thought was that they too would experience this feeling someday. This was more than 'love,' it was like love completed. I think it was actually fulfillment.

When these things made this sound, I heard words in my head. It is like the textbook telepathy scenarios you hear about. It was bizarre but I am convinced. That sound they made is probably why humans love music so much. I think human 'music' is subconsciously mimicking what we all know exists in our Spirit life.

After a short (I think) time I was told that I couldn't stay, it was time to leave. There was an absolute sense of 'you're not done' in the message I got. I wasn't instructed or anything like that, It was just time to go.

Truthfully, I think a lot of the world gets this message at one time or another. Not the same message but similar. It's almost as if when you go there your mind is opened up.

I am not an emotional person. However this experience changed that. I am a verifiable train wreck of emotion at times. And worse, it sneaks up on you. Some time you get these huge surges of emotion.

I've thought long and hard about all these combined events. I am convinced that someone is using humans as virtual plants in a garden and they are harvesting positive emotion. All else, evil deeds, cancers, etc, all dies off. The human Spirit and emotion are like petals on a flower. The humans are the flowers and our good deeds, our Karma, is our pollen. We spread each others pollen and create more good deeds.

That's probably nuts but up until now I've held back. That is what I feel. We are flowers in (Gods) garden.

Oh yeah, and it didn't smell there. I don't remember any odor whatsoever. That's good because I think it proves conclusively that there are no aliens in Heaven.

It never really occurred to me at the time that the Clock Room was maybe "The Pearly Gates" that people refer to.

10

The Life Cycle of Earth is like a baseball game in a series. But, this series never ends. Our Spirits are the players for each inning of every game, over and over. We are eternal. You know that thing called Karma, well, I think that is our Spirits vapor or chem trail.

Fun Facts: Aircraft vapor or "chemtrails" are mostly condensation. Crop Circles are bent wheat.

Stick with me and focus on the message. The only purpose of this message is to eliminate human suffrage when the time comes. That, I believe, is MY soul purpose in life (pun intended). This isn't a warning about a flood as much as it is a message for your Spirit.

Except probably a few Generals, no one knows when this will happen. But science and collateral information indicate to me that the Black Fury is inevitable. Hang on, enjoy the show, and relish in the magnitude and glory of it all.

Spy Training: Collateral information is publicly available information. It doesn't mean it's real or true, it just means it's a piece of the puzzle.

Near Death Experiences (NDEs) some times include stories of 'life reviews.' Transition to the Spirit dimension contains a review of their human existence. How cool is that? These recollections prove that each and everything we do in life is recorded and accessible. If that doesn't get your attention, it should. What will YOUR replay look like?

No one is 'watching' but our species is under observation and modification. Many biblical characters and others have been contacted by the Master and his Team over the years. Most people discard the accounts as biblical mythology or fantasy. Moses and Admiral Byrd were both selected because they were virtuous humans that had the respect of their people. The Master himself said that they had contacted others will limited success. We are probably being more thoroughly scrutinized than you can imagine. If Humans can stream television, trust me, The Master and his Team can stream your life.

I may look like you but I am different, we are all different. We all have a story and we all have a purpose. I implore you to follow your passion. Your Spirit holds your passion. Listen to yourself.

Fun Fact: I'm so different that I was born as a "Blue baby" so there's a chance that I've died a couple times. I was always different, I have two 'cow licks' in my hair and according to an MRI I have two white orbs in my brain! Woot! I was brought home from the hospital for Christmas.. My mother had nine kids and would freely admit I was her favorite! They all laugh about it. :-) I am blessed.

Open your minds and open your hearts, this ride is almost over and everything matters.

It is inconceivable that everything in my stories is real. I don't have advanced degrees of academic study. What I do have are Life Experiences. I was professionally trained to listen and observe, and that's what I've been doing for decades. I never really stopped to put it all together until recently. My life was like the Black Fury. Now that the waters have calmed, I've settled and my brain waves have settled. I am in sync.

Governments and religions declare wars, man fights them.

Maybe social media such as this story can unite the human species. The Black Fury is headed our way and, as the Master said, our science and weapons will be useless.

If I am wrong and Life on Earth does not end, I apologize.

This is my 'perspective' and if it's wrong, I'll give you your money back.

Welcome to 11

The End

I'll see you on the other side...

Peace!