In a significant stride towards challenging son preference deeply entrenched in patriarchal cultures, this year witnessed the launch of a groundbreaking campaign by Muheem, Girls Count and Sweccha, in collaboration with the support of UNFPA. The campaign is dedicated to addressing the critical issue of 'Sohar Geet,' a cultural practice that perpetuates son preference. The inaugural meeting, held in Varanasi, set the stage for the launch of the first-ever 'Sohar Geet' in Hindi. This powerful initiative was unveiled at Banaras Hindu University during the International Day of the Girl Child, symbolizing a commitment to celebrate daughters and challenge traditional norms.
