

SUPER FINANCIER

NEXT “LEVEL

I've taken the words "Next Level" and made them synonymous with my name, reintroducing myself as MrNextLevel. After 6 short years in the commercial finance industry, a global pandemic and free government programs, as a Human Centered Design Thinker I finally get it.

TYLER ANDERSON
CEO Of Next Level Funding

The noise and clutter of the commercial loan approval process often overwhelms the relationship-based aspects, and the lack of digitalization weakens a lender's position, adding cost and time to an already bloated process.

The principals of those organizations aren't interested in spending an entire evening being entertained just so they can find the right time to ask for financial statements. Millennials are most interested in automation and they make up the largest group of working-age people in the world today.

DISTASTE FOR “TRADITIONAL” FINANCIAL PROCESS

When account managers and lenders can shift away from work that can be automated and instead move toward being a trusted advisor to their borrower, both sides can benefit. Next Level Funding, has made the shift and automated the entire lending process.

Borrowers now have the ability to apply for funding, upload documents, receive & review offers, accept terms, sign contracts and have funds direct deposited into their business bank account.

INCREASINGLY DIGITALLY-SAVVY COMPANIES are investing billions of dollars into automation. The good news is that technology is not just for the consumer crowd. Advanced digitalization can reinvent the commercial lending landscape and remove obstacles for growth.

BECOME TRUSTED ADVISOR

Rather than just being a loan advocate, a financing agent could instead provide advice about how to handle interest rate fluctuations or currency exposure. Perhaps they could educate borrowers on how to avoid phishing scams and security breaches.

AUTOMATION MEANS EFFICIENCY

Gone are the days of "sticky notes" telling someone when to continue a lien. The modern ops team can automate those tasks and use their time to identify other client opportunities, making their role far more valuable than ever before.