

Bishop's Reflection 6th Sunday in Ordinary Time (Year C)

With a Physician's concern for those who are poor and disenfranchised in our society, Luke turns his attention to Jesus' teaching towards the poor, the disenfranchised and those in need of forgiveness. "Blessed are you who are poor," Jesus tells his disciples, many of whom were poor, disenfranchised and looking for some measure of hope. "Blessed are you who are hungry now... who weep now... Blessed are you when people hate you, and when they exclude you, revile you, and defame you on account of the Son of Man." We can well imagine the effects Jesus' words had on the people to whom Luke wrote, many of whom had endured much for the faith they professed.

Nor does Luke shy away from Jesus' corresponding woes to those who are "rich", "full now", "laughing now", and those who seek popularity over all else. By including these words of Jesus, Luke is warning members of his own community who are over-reliant on riches, comfort and the opinion of others, and reassuring those who are adversely affected that there will be a day of reckoning. Known for his focus on Jesus' teaching on mercy, Luke doesn't leave out Jesus' teaching on justice. Both have a role to play in the overall context of Christ's coming and his revelation of God's kingdom.

"Blessed are you who are poor, for yours is the kingdom of God." Far from promoting poverty as a virtue, Jesus simply acknowledges the hardships and the uncertainty that are part of his disciples' lives. Jesus identifies with the poor, because he became poor himself. Not only did he renounce his equality with God, but he was born in a stable, was forced to flee into Egypt and was brought up under the humblest of conditions in Nazareth. Jesus' teaching was often questioned, not only because of his socio-economic background – after all, he was the Carpenter's Son, but because he associated with the poor and the marginalized, and advocated for them on many different occasions.

"Blessed are you who are hungry now, for you will be filled." Though Mary and Joseph would have spared their child the hardship of hunger, Jesus fasted for forty days and forty nights in the wilderness and knew the hardships of being an itinerant preacher. Jesus knew both the feasting associated with the welcome he received into people's homes, as well as the hunger of being rejected. When the crowds had been with him for up to three days, the compassion he had, due to his own experience as one who knew hunger, moved him to instruct his disciples to feed the large crowd with five loaves and two fish.

"Blessed are you weep now, for you will laugh." Jesus knew the sorrow of losing a parent, the sorrow of leaving family and friends behind and the sorrow of those who had no where else to turn for comfort and consolation. More importantly, however, he knew the sorrow that is due to sin. Here is a man who knew how to laugh in the company of his friends and to rejoice with those who were willing to repent, but who wept openly for Jerusalem and the hardness of heart among many of the authorities. Laughing and weeping have many different dimensions in our lives, too. Let us take steps to be in closer union with the tears and laughter of our Lord.

"Blessed are you when people hate you, exclude you, revile you and defame you on account of the Son of Man." When Jesus looked at his disciples, he knew the road he asked them to take was not an easy one – nor is ours. Remember that Christ has gone before us, that Jesus, as crucified Messiah, is himself "the Way". Through our hardships, we turn to him, and learn to trust in him. No, he will not take our struggles away, but he does give us the strength to endure and overcome them. Let us, therefore, draw our strength and courage from him, uniting ourselves to him whose unity, hope and trust was in the Father.
