Investing in Students, Powering the Future

CEC and WFEC tax dollars contribute $1.8 million to local education

At Choctaw Electric Cooperative, supporting our local students isn't just a goal—it's built into the way we do business. As a not-for-profit electric cooperative, we're proud that our operations directly benefit 25 area school districts through the gross receipts tax.

In 2024 alone, CEC and our power supplier, Western Farmers Electric Cooperative (WFEC), provided $1,881,015 in funding to local schools. That's real, tangible support—dollars that help fund classroom supplies, technology, extracurricular programs and more.

Here's how it works: Instead of paying traditional property taxes, Oklahoma's electric co-ops pay a 2% gross receipts tax on revenue. And here's the best part—95% of that tax goes straight to schools, based on how many miles of co-op power lines run through a district. On a percentage basis, co-ops give more to local schools than other utilities. The chart to the right shows 2024 tax disbursements to local schools from CEC and WFEC.

Connected at the Capitol

On April 7, I had the opportunity to attend Cooperative Day at the state Capitol alongside nearly 200 other electric co-op leaders from across Oklahoma. It was a day filled with meaningful conversations, updates on pending legislation and—most importantly—a shared commitment to serving our members.

As demands on the electric grid increase, particularly with the rise of energy-intensive technologies like AI and the data centers that support them, staying connected to the legislative process becomes more critical than ever. These shifts place new pressures not only on distribution cooperatives like ours, but also on the generation and transmission cooperatives that help power our system. At the end of the day, what happens at the Capitol affects all of us.

We're proud to work in partnership with the Oklahoma Association of Electric Cooperatives, our statewide trade organization. OAEC is at the Capitol daily, keeping a close watch on legislation, sharing information and serving as a trusted point of contact for lawmakers. That consistent presence matters. When legislators have questions about how new policies might affect rural Oklahoma, they often reach out—and we're grateful for the relationships that make those conversations possible.

Electric co-ops serve 97% of Oklahoma's land mass, which means decisions made in Oklahoma City have a wide-reaching impact. Even legislation that doesn't directly apply to Choctaw Electric Cooperative may have implications for how energy is generated, delivered or regulated in the future.

While CEC doesn't get involved in partisan politics, we remain committed to advocating for our members. Legislators from both sides of the aisle continue to recognize the importance of the cooperative model—a model that began more than 80 years ago and remains just as strong today. That's a legacy we're proud of—and one we will continue to advance.

Preserve Our Legacy

This year, Choctaw Electric Cooperative is celebrating 85 years of service. We're marking this milestone with a special project to preserve the co-op's rich history. The project will gather, organize and digitize a collection of photos and memorabilia that tell the story of CEC and the communities we serve. To contribute stories, photos, recipes or other memorabilia, please contact Jia Johnson at 800-780-6486, ext. 241.

Youth Tour 2025

Washington Youth Tour will take place June 13 -19, 2025.

Clean Coils for Cool Savings

Routine maintenance is important to keep your refrigerator running efficiently. Lint and dirt should be cleaned from the refrigerator coils every six months to a year, and more often if there are pets in the home. When coils are coated with lint, dust or pet hair, your refrigerator works harder than it's designed to, which can prevent the appliance from cooling properly and efficiently. The additional work can increase the energy costs of the refrigerator by as much as 35% and shorten the life of the appliance. Source: energy.gov
