PLACES OF NOTE ALONG THE TOUR

As we go winding along the tour route, there are a couple of interesting places we will pass or pass through. Spooky places, if you believe in that sort of thing. Interesting history even if you don't believe in the supernatural.

The first spooky place is the old Salem County Insane Asylum

In 1870, Salem County constructed a county insane asylum on what is now Route 45 in Mannington Township, to address a lack of state action to address overcrowding in state-run facilities.

Known as The County Farm, the county almshouse and asylum were located adjacent to each other and housed the county's "insane" until 1925 when the residents were then moved to the state facility, making room for area's poor residents to move in.

Legend has it that patients were chained up in the six individual rooms that make up the basement. Many hauntings have occurred in this building over the years. Heavy breathing, screams to "Get Out" and such. Eventually the building was shut down and the ghosts of the past have been left to rest in peace.

The second Spooky Place to look for is a place called Mutton Town Woods

Mutton Town Woods is quite a creepy section of roadway between Alloway Twp and Quinton Twp well known for supernatural happenings. This area was once part of a farm built in the 1600's belonging to a Benjamin Wyncoop. On that property was a slaughterhouse he used to slaughter sheep. Many hundreds of sheep. Originally known as Wycoop's Woods, over the years it became known as Mutton Town Woods due to the slaughterhouse.

On a quiet night driving through these woods you may still hear the screaming of the sheep. Ghostly figures have been spotted walking the road at night. You will also sometimes hear dogs bark where there are no dogs. Another person I know personally was stopped at the intersection when she encountered a large orange sphere floating above the road. When it did not move, she turned around and drove back to where she came from and found another way home. I think everyone in the area probably has some strange tale of driving at night along Mutton Town Woods.
