Digital Motor	AC Motor	Micro-Ac Motor	Rotary Motor
Infrared Technology	AC (not DC)	Tri-Plex Fusion	Ionic Technology
Infrared heat is used to dry the hair more efficiently and gently compared to traditional hair dryers that rely solely on direct hot air.	An "AC" or "DC" on a dryer refers to current. An alternating current (AC) motor tends to be the Professional choice, as it is typically stronger and hotter than a dryer utilizing a direct current (DC) motor.	Emits negative ions with Tourmaline technology that seals the cuticle with moisture to reduce frizz to add shine for a silky finish.	Emits negatively charged ions during the drying process. These ions interact with the positively charged water molecules in wet hair, causing them to break down into smaller droplets.
