How prepared are you for meeting the needs of your EAL learners?

Attend our training to ensure you are well equipped to provide appropriately for your EAL (English as an additional language) learners.

Teachers revealed ‘they lacked confidence to meet the needs of EAL learners, and felt extra pressure to do it themselves with no external help or guidance.’

Context

Teachers need to assess the language proficiency skills of EAL learners so they can make informed decisions on appropriate provision needed to address the gaps. Listening and speaking skills are essential for success in the classroom. Educators need to ensure that EAL learners have ongoing opportunities to develop their social and academic language so that they achieve in the curriculum. In addition, their well-being will be strengthened if they are given a chance to develop their emotional literacy skills. This webinar will focus on how practitioners can continue to support EAL pupils to engage confidently in school.

Outline

Areas covered will include:

- Induction and assessment
- Listening and speaking
- Well being

Outcomes

Participants will feel better prepared in addressing the learning needs of EAL learners through:

- Understanding and implementing appropriate strategies to support induction (new arrivals and those in transition)
- Using appropriate assessment procedures in assessing
- Planning listening and speaking opportunities in the curriculum to support language development
- Equipping learners with tools to manage their emotions and develop positive learning attitudes
