Arrowmen,

Are you interested in learning about ceremonies? Do you want to find out more about being a ceremonialist or performing call outs? Do you want to form a chapter team or get in touch with other ceremonialists from our lodge? Are you an advisor looking for tips on how to get a team started in your chapter? Are you already on a team and have not had a chance to attend a workshop and get regalia?

If you answered yes to any of those questions or if you simply want to get a better understanding of the induction process, then Ceremony Workshop is an event that you want to attend.

In just under 2 weeks our lodge will be hosting a workshop and training event at Lost Pines in Bastrop. Attendees will be able to receive instruction from experienced ceremonialists and team advisors. They will also get over 130 pages of training material including scripts for Pre-Ordeal, Ordeal, and Call Outs as well as great resources for learning ceremonies and developing teams.

If you are interested in getting regalia there is the option for first time attendees to get a ribbon shirt, leggings, and an apron for a very discounted price. During sign up you will have the option to select this option.

In addition to all of the wonderful experience you will receive at the workshop there will also be presentations on moccasins, beadwork, and head gear that you won't want to miss.

Ceremony Workshop Dates – Feb 11 -13 (please see the tentative schedule attached)

Please use this link to sign up <https://scoutingevent.com/564-OACW>

During the weekend we are also offering a brotherhood ceremony on Saturday evening for attendees as well as anyone wishing to come just for the ceremony. If you are attending the workshop as want to get your bars and seal your membership as a brotherhood member please select that as an add on option during registration. If you are planning on just attending Saturday evening you only need to select the "brotherhood only option".

Yours in Brotherhood,

Trevor Roberts
Tonkawa 99 Lodge Chief

Merit Badges

Scouts and parents,

We would like to clarify policies and procedures for merit badges from both the BSA and Troop 52. Several questions have come up. Scouts, parents, and counselors should take note of these instructions.

The final word on advancement is called the BSA Guide to Advancement. It is here:

<https://filestore.scouting.org/filestore/pdf/33088.pdf>

Merit badges start on page 40.

These are the Troop 52 policies and procedures.

I. Blue Cards

Scouts should obtain a Blue Card by requesting one through Scoutbook. In the case of the troop conducting a merit badge at a troop meeting, a class, or activity at a campout, then the scout will not need to individually ask for a blue card. The merit badge counselor will be responsible for taking attendance and giving proper credit. For other merit badges, it is still a good practice to obtain a blue card and contact a counselor before beginning work on any merit badge in case there are questions. There are exceptions for doing work without getting a blue card first.

The Guide to Advancement says at 7.0.0.3:

“Even though Scouts may benefit from reviewing requirements with a merit badge counselor before getting to work, a Scout may begin the effort on any badge at any time after registering in Scouts BSA or becoming a qualified Venturer or Sea Scout. It is the counselor’s decision whether to accept work or activities completed prior to any meeting with the unit leader or the merit badge counselor. Common sense should prevail, however. For example, nights already camped as a Scout in Scouts BSA or as a qualified Venturer or Sea Scout, or coins or stamps already collected, would count toward their respective badges.”

Some items would clearly be called into question for proper credit. For example, tasks such as trips, camping, or hikes before joining scouts might not count for credit (ex: in third grade a class field trip visited the Capitol, a scout went camping with his parents on their own, etc.). Some merit badge requirements state “with the approval of your counselor” or other similar language. In cases like this, a scout should seek the approval from the merit badge counselor prior to doing the activity. In all cases, read the requirement.

II. Worksheets

Worksheets are a good idea, but are not required. The worksheet is there to assist the scout. Sitting for a merit badge is not a test. It's a review. It is the merit badge counselor's judgment to decide if the scout has met the requirements. Some scouts have all the info in their heads. Some need the paper. Either is fine. We strongly suggest using the worksheets because it lets the scout see the list of requirements right in front of him as the instructor is teaching. It gives them a place to take notes. Also, many requirements say "make a list," "keep a chart," "track and record," or "explain" something. That is what the worksheet allows the scout to do. Likewise, if the requirement says “demonstrate” or “discuss” then the scout should demonstrate it by doing it or discussing it out loud with the counselor. Maybe there are notes on the worksheet to reference during the discussion. Maybe there aren't. Again, either is fine. A merit badge counselor is not allowed to add requirements to a merit badge, so requiring the worksheet be filled out would be adding a requirement. However, if a scout can't discuss it (whether looking at the paper or by talking about it) then there can't be any credit for doing the work.

The Guide to Advancement says:

7.0.4.8 Unofficial Worksheets and Learning Aids

“Worksheets and other materials that may be of assistance in earning merit badges are available from a variety of places including unofficial sources on the internet and even troop libraries. Use of these aids is permissible as long as the materials can be correlated with the current requirements that Scouts must fulfill. Completing “worksheets” may suffice where a requirement calls for something in writing, but this would not work for a requirement where the Scout must discuss, tell, show, or demonstrate, etc. Note that Scouts shall not be required to use these learning aids in order to complete a merit badge.”

III. Eagle Required Merit Badges

The troop policy has always been that an Eagle-required merit badge taken outside the troop (such as summer camp or online classes) must be reviewed by a Troop 52 counselor to make sure that the requirements were satisfied. It does not mean re-teaching it or repeating work. It's a quality control exercise. We want earning Eagle Scout in Troop 52 to be truly meaningful and challenging. In the past, we have on several occasions found requirements at camp or online classes signed off where the scout clearly did not do the task and simply sat in a merit badge class with a dozen others and did not participate. That is not what we want to accomplish.

Here are some examples:

The Cooking merit badge says "plan a menu," "create a shopping list," and "cook the meals," etc. It does not say "watch" or "assist" or "learn about." That's why we want the boy to be grubmaster for a campout with his patrol from start to finish, not take part in a group lesson or sharing the same tasks among multiple scouts. This is an example where the worksheets provide an excellent resource for writing down menus and shopping lists.

Citizenship in the Nation requirement #4 says discuss several documents, including the Constitution. A scout who took an online class and did not participate other than listening has not discussed it. A scout cannot discuss something until he's read it, so the merit badge counseling session should not be the first time the scout has considered the information. Again, some notes on a worksheet would help in this situation when meeting with the counselor. If they haven't read the Constitution, they can't very well discuss it. We don't expect them to memorize it or understand it the way a lawyer would.

Why do we require Eagle-required merit badges taken at camp or outside the troop be reviewed? There have been specific examples of Environmental Science and Citizenship in the Nation, which are two difficult badges, taken at camp. One class for Environmental Science completely omitted any discussion of bees for #2G, but the counselor signed that the boys did it anyway. For Citizenship in the Nation, requirement #8 says for the scouts to find out who YOUR two senators and House rep are, then write to one and show the letter and any response to the counselor. The summer camp counselor simply had all the scouts write to a senator in New Mexico because that's where camp was. When they got back from camp, no one had a copy of his letter, no one could remember who he wrote, and they still didn't know who their Texas senators and rep were. That's not what the requirement says to do, so all that time taking that class was wasted.

Additionally, we don't want scouts to sit with their parent who is also the merit badge counselor if it's Eagle-required. We have multiple counselors and it encourages the boy to learn to relate to a different adult.

The Guide to Advancement says at 7.0.0.3:

"Counselors may work with and pass any member, including their own children, wards, or relatives. Nevertheless, we often teach young people the importance of broadening horizons. Scouts meeting with counselors beyond their families and beyond even their own units are doing that. They will benefit from the perspectives of many "teachers" and will learn more as a result. They should be encouraged to reach out."

IV. Non-Eagle Required Merit Badges

Non-Eagle required merit badges taken at camp do not require the scout to sit for the badge if the whole thing was completed at camp. For example, if a scout takes Canoeing merit badge at camp for a week and comes back with a completed, signed blue card, we accept it. No sitting. The counselor at camp is saying the scout passed. Since it is not Eagle-required, there is no extra review unless the badge is only partially done. If it's only partially done, the scout would need to make an appointment with a merit badge counselor to show the completed work or make a plan to do so.

A scout's parent who is teaching a non-Eagle required merit badge is fine to sign off requirements if it's part of a class being taught to a group. If it's not a part of a group lesson or if it is an individual session, then we would prefer it if the scout sat with another counselor just to give the scout a better experience in relating to multiple adults. We would not prohibit the parent sitting with him if there are no other counselors available.

Hopefully, this clears things up. If you have questions about the merit badge program, please ask Mr. Ezell.

New Troop 52 Advancement Process

Scouts and parents,

As of January 1, 2022, we are following this process for rank advancement. Please take note.

Life and Eagle Scouts (as well as ASMs) will still physically sign books. Upon completing all rank requirements, scouts will go to their designated ASM for their patrol to show their books for verification. The ASM will check off items online in Scoutbook because that is the official record that BSA uses. At troop meetings, the Advancement Coordinator (Mrs. Royal) will take names from boys and set up appointments for a Scoutmaster Conference (SMC) and Board of Review (BOR) for the boy asking for one. They can be done at meetings or campouts. Ideally, SMCs will be done by one of the ASMs at large, especially Star and Life. The Scoutmaster will continue to do all Eagle SMCs.

BORs will be done among committee members and parents who are not ASMs. We would like to avoid the same ASM doing SMCs for the same boy for multiple ranks since we want the boys to learn how to deal with multiple adults. The Advancement Chair (Mr. Bates) and/or Coordinator (Mrs. Royal) marks as complete in Scoutbook for the next Court of Honor.

Merit badge blue cards will be requested by scouts through Scoutbook.

When we receive new scouts at Crossover, the ASMs for each patrol can help welcome the new boys to their patrols and help mentor the new parents and answer their questions. We will pair those parents with an ASM to assist as new parent mentors.

Each ASM for the patrols will serve that patrol for a year and then we will transition to newer ASMs as we gain new leaders. We realize that not everyone can make every meeting, so hopefully we will have enough ASMs at a meeting for coverage.

Citizenship in Society Merit Badge

On November 1st, the Boy Scouts of America launched the Citizenship in Society merit badge, its newest merit badge for youth in the Scouts BSA program (one that will become Eagle-required starting July 1, 2022). The merit badge is focused on a journey of self-discovery concerning topics around diversity, equity, and inclusion, and how those discussions benefit society through the lens of the Scout Oath and Law. All key facts and information about this merit badge can be found at www.scouting.org/dei. You can contact our merit badge counselor, Josi Bogdon, at easonj@sbcglobal.net or 512.971.8141 for more information.
