

Title Specialists of Virginia, LLC

July 2020 Newsletter

★ Happy Fourth of July! ★

We hope you all had a fun Independence Day and found some safe ways to celebrate! We are in the thick of summer, and despite social distancing, the real estate market is hot. We are grateful for your business. We appreciate your help thus far in complying with CDC guidelines to ensure our office, staff, and customers remain safe, and we thank you for continuing to rely on us to assist with your settlements!

Families fleeing the city are pushing up home prices amid tight supply

(from nbcnews.com)

5 closing costs that will take a bite out of your home sale profits

(from realtor.com)

What the Fed's 0% interest rate plan means for mortgage rates

(from money.com)

9 air conditioner myths you really need to stop believing

(from readersdigest.com)

Here's what to know before listing your home for sale by owner

(from realsimple.com)

Pandemic squeezes already low housing supply

(from cnbc.com)

Sales of existing homes plunged in May, but agents think that was the bottom

(from msn.com)

This is what the CDC says you should do when someone comes over

(from bestlifeonline.com)

Backyard office spaces gaining popularity after coronavirus pandemic

(from cnbc.com)

15 ways to repel bugs naturally (and cheaply)

(from cheapism.com)