LAKE CHAMPLAIN

FROM THE SALEM WITCH TRIALS TO THE HEADLESS HORSEMAN, NEW ENGLAND IS HOME TO SOME OF THE NATION'S OLDEST SETTINGS, STORIES, AND SAGAS.

Fact, fiction, and fantastic scenery abound on this vibrant vacation and historical journey through New England and the Hudson Valley.

This undiscovered tour appropriately kicks off in Boston and nearby Lexington, the “Birthplace of American Liberty,” where the opening shots of the Battles of Lexington and Concord were fired in 1775. Digest the fascinating history of the American Revolution before a hearty New England lunch at the historic Concord Colonial Inn which was once used as an arms and provision storehouse for the local Patriots.

Leaving Concord’s Old North Bridge, site of “the shot heard round the world,” you can hear a pin drop as you visit the storied city of Salem and head toward the peaceful vistas of coastal Maine, rural New Hampshire, and mountainous Vermont. Charming seaport villages, bucolic covered bridges, and rolling maple syrup farms sweeten the storylines across America’s historic East Coast. Swirl and sip at Vermont’s sustainable Shelburne Vineyard, enjoy a lighthouse-keeper presentation in Portland, Maine, and learn why everyone’s eyes light up upon tasting Freeport’s famous Whoopie Pie.

The plot thickens as you ferry across Lake Champlain to immerse yourself in the scene stealers of New York and Massachusetts, including the resort village and Olympic Games site of Lake Placid, the picturesque Berkshire Mountains, and the orchard- and vineyard dotted riverbanks of the quaint Hudson Valley. You’ll have time to explore the legendary sights of timeless Tarrytown, the setting of Washington Irving’s The Legend of Sleepy Hollow, and tour the waterfront U.S. Military Academy at West Point where you’ll want to be sure to stand up straight. You wouldn’t want to miss the spectacular views.

BILTMORE ESTATE

INTOXICATING VIEWS AWAIT IN THE BLUEGRASS STATE AS WELL AS NEIGHBORING TENNESSEE AND NORTH CAROLINA

When teaching visitors the correct pronunciation of their city, Louisville locals advise to say it like you've had a shot of bourbon, Loo-a-vul. In this easygoing part of the country where the drawl is part of the draw, a bottle of Kentucky's finest is easy to come by, as is mighty fine scenery, music, customs, and cuisine.

Make your way from bucolic horse country and the Great Smoky Mountains to the South's current "it" cities of Asheville, Nashville, and Chattanooga. You'll first take the reins in the land of mares, mint juleps, and mandolins with a special evening of bluegrass entertainment as well as visits to a centuries-old bourbon distillery, a Lexington thoroughbred horse farm, and Louisville's legendary Brown Hotel to taste its famous Hot Brown open-faced sandwich.

The drool-worthy sights continue as you cruise along the South's most scenic highways to the majestic peaks and even more imposing mansions the region is known for. In the shadow of the Blue Ridge Mountains, George Vanderbilt's grand Biltmore Estate welcomes you for a guided tour of the 250-room home—the largest privately owned home in the U.S.—and a farm-to-table lunch in its boutique- and bistro-lined Antler Hill Village. Make sure you save room for a night on the town in eclectic Asheville, known for its low key vibe and high number of microbreweries.

There's plenty to toast in two more of the South's emerging cities where the music, dining, and art scenes have the world taking notice. In the charismatic, waterfront city of Chattanooga, you'll visit the pop culture-themed Songbird Guitar Museum and taste the city's famous MoonPie treat before heading to Nashville for guided sightseeing, a farewell dinner, and accommodations near the melodious sounds of Honky Tonk Row.
