PURPOSE: Being diagnosed with breast cancer in Alabama is especially daunting. Alabama is one of only ten states that has chosen not to expand Medicaid following the 2010 passage of the Affordable Care Act. Moreover, since 2005, eight rural hospitals have closed in Alabama and, according to data collected by the Center for Healthcare Quality and Payment Reform, 25 of Alabama's 52 rural hospitals are in danger of closing, with 16 of those considered in immediate danger. Increasingly, Alabamians have been forced to travel an average of 90 miles each way for chemotherapy, radiation, and surgery, and to rely on nonprofits to provide them with access to cancer healthcare and resources.

Forge does just that. We step into the void, providing individualized supportive services to anyone impacted by breast cancer in Alabama.
