Barriers Encountered	Staffing for child care center-based programs continues to be a major challenge. Programs keeping staff and hiring staff, and even staff showing up for interviews. CCR&amp;R continues to be here to help support and advocate for this barrier and this is a barrier across the state and country. Stress in this profession and helping be a listening ear for programs and or as questions or needs come up related to new opportunities like grants, opening or expanding a child care center and QRS/IQ4K. There is a lot going on around child care currently. CCR&amp;R staff are here to help with anything. Lots of virtual visits still an option but CCR&amp;R staff can go out to do onsite. We continue to work with local and regional CCR&amp;R staff to support offering trainings and virtual meetings for directors and programs about information like health and Safety practices and getting I-Power info into the DHS training registry.
Success Stories	Through consultation with their local BH CCR&amp;R Child Care Consultant, a child care home provider working on her CNET certification process was introduced to using a screening tool in her program. The Consultant introduced the CDC Developmental Milestones, tracker, and other resources. The child care provider had not used a screening tool in a formal manner before. This provider needed some adaptations to these resources that the consultant was able to help support her with. The consultants work to individualize these tools and resources to fit the needs for the provider helped her to start use with them right away. The provider was able to share the results of using this tool with a parent of an infant in her care. The parent and provider were able to discuss what could be focused on with the child's development. She suggested a couple of activities to the parent and together the parent and provider choose what to work on to assist the child's development. The parent asked some more question on their own related to development of their child. The consultant and provider were able to share more resources with the parent. and if they were still having concerns. they reassured them that resources with the parents, and if they were still having concerns, they reassured them that they would all work together to support the child's development. What a way to build strong relationships all around to support providers, parents, and children!

Regional CCR&R Consultant Staff also supported BH programs along with BH CC Consultants, with and additional 43 onsite Consultation visits and 58 TA.
