Barriers Encountered	One barrier I have noticed while speaking with families about resources is there is still some hesitation on in person interactions due to the pandemic. I have made a point to share with families there are still virtual options available if families are more comfortable with that. Also, there seems to have been more out of county families recently. I do have a few resources available for families living in other counties if they are interested.
Success Stories	I met with a first time mom who was very anxious about going home with a new baby. I spoke with the mom for quite a while about different resources available to help with both social support and parenting education. She was interested in all the resource I offered. Before I left her room, she started tearing up and stated she was just so happy and relieved there are so many people willing to help her.
