Also outcomes reported may reflect information being sent but not whether the family was enrolled.
Barriers Encountered	I have been calling families on their hospital room phone during the pandemic. This can be challenging due to some families not answering the phone and not being able to leave a message for them. Also, several families I have made contact with were non-English speaking families. It has been coordinated with the hospitals to use their interpreter over the phone so I can reach out to those families and offer resources as well.
Success Stories	A prenatal mom was referred to our program by the Midwives office. Mom was non-English speaking so I was able to speak with her over the phone using the interpreter at the doctor's office. She was struggling with food insecurity and items she needed for her baby. She was referred to a home visiting program and Family and Children's Council was able to help with a car seat once the baby was born. Mom was relieved with the support she received from our program and also the community resources that she was connected with.
