Barriers Encountered	A barrier that has continued with more and more of the perspective providers inquiring about home child care registration is related to one requirement. Home child care providers that Rent must have ( in their DHS application) a copy of their lease/rental agreement and the property owner complete a form stating that they give the provider permission to do child care in that home. Consultants are up front right away with people as they call and look into Registration. Most people are not moving forward with getting Registered that rent because their property owner will not give them permission to do child care. Consultants have supported helping prospective providers and property owners understand more and give clarification on what is needed or other questions related child care.
Success Stories	Consultants are working creatively to support provider's needs, and one CCR&amp;R Consultant is piloting working in a cohort group with home child care providers that are interested in renewing their CNet Certification and also applying for IQ4K. She is bringing them together in a face to face setting at our office. She has been doing this on various Sat. and Friday evening based on both her and provider's schedules. These providers are driven to achieve some of their goals and be able to work as a small group. They have started to learn about the new requirements of IQ4K, and focused on areas of business practices and policies that are required in both CNet Certification and IQ4K. Providers are saying that this is helpful because it gives them focused time, away from their home, with in- the moment support from their Consultants. Other CCR&amp;R staff like IQ4K Specialist have attended some of these meetings. Providers are building relationships with other home child care providers that attend and are connecting outside of this opportunity! Providers are engaging with others that do the same things they do and in the similar environment. Being able to share in conversation and ask questions that they may all have benefits the entire group. The ability to bring this group together is helping the Consultant to manage her time more efficiently vs doing 1:1 visits. The requirements for both CNet and IQ4K are more intensive and its more challenging to go through this at a day time visit and have a home provider's full understanding/attention, while they need to be caring for children. Consultation services will continue to be creative to meet the needs of the child care provider community.

40 onsite consultation visits and 28 TA opportunities were provided by other Regional funded CCR&R staff to support child care programs BH .
