Detailed Plot Description

After four members of the Cruz drug cartel smuggle twenty blocks of C-4 explosive across the Mexican border, a motorcycle explodes killing the rider and injuring another. Two survivors leave the site and continue their mission to bomb separate cities as a distraction while the cartel increases heroin sales inside the U.S.

Park Ranger Mary Thompson calls the Pima County Sheriff to report the explosion. Deputy Bill Clauson investigates the explosion, finding one man dead and another injured. Fiona Fitzgerald, a CSI tech for the Phoenix police department, is loaned to Pima County. Clauson, Thompson, and Fiona return to the site of the explosion to investigate.

Joseph Fitzgerald, Fiona's husband, works for the Phoenix Gazette and completes a three part exposé on smuggling heroin into the U.S. The story antagonizes several people in local government and law enforcement. It also draws the attention of Enrique Cruz, leader of the cartel. He has Joseph and another reporter kidnapped. Fiona and Sean O'Mally lead the rescue of the reporters.

The Los Angeles bomber intends to plant his bomb at the LA Colosseum. Police confront him at his motel. When detonated, his bomb fails to explode. He's arrested and interrogated by police.

Meanwhile, a power struggle erupts within the Cruz cartel. Philip Ortega, Chief of Security, is imprisoned by Enrique. Philip's sister, Adelina, is also Enrique's mistress. She asks Pablo Guzman to rescue Philip.

The Phoenix bomber, Miguel Garcia, is located and a SWAT assault is launched. Homeland Security's Agent Boyle orders his tactical units to Garcia's motel, but their communications system fails. Garcia takes four hostages, then steals a car and escapes from the motel. A high-speed car chase ensues but the escape stalls when the tires are flattened. Minutes later, the car explodes leaving no trace of Garcia. Available at www.CrimesOfVengeance.com.
