Indiana Forestry & Woodland OWNERS ASSOCIATION

Working for Indiana Woodlands

IFWOA produces this directory as a resource for Indiana woodland owners. We educate and advocate for responsible forest conservation and management.

We provide learning events such as webinars, forestry field days and workshops and represent woodland owners' interests at the state legislature and with state agencies.

Membership is available to woodland owners or anyone interested in forestry.

KEY INDIANA FORESTRY ISSUES

- Lack of understanding of the importance of forests and forest management
- Forest health: invasive species, pests and diseases
- Turnover in land ownership causes lack of continuity in long term management
- Loss of forest acreage and biodiversity due to smaller parcels
- Accessing incentives (cost share, tax programs) which encourage woodland stewardship

HOW TO USE THIS DIRECTORY

Use this directory to locate foresters in your area, identify foresters who perform a service you need, or contact a specific forester. See the state map on pages 34-35 to find foresters geographically.

For an online interactive version of this directory go to: www.findindianaforester.org.

In this publication, the term “professional forester” means a person who has successfully completed a four year college level curriculum accredited by the Society of American Foresters and has received a Bachelor’s Degree in Forestry from that accredited institution. All foresters listed meet these criteria.

A Consulting Forester is a self-employed professional forester who offers management services to private woodland owners for a fee.

An Industrial Forester is a professional forester who is also a licensed timber buyer and/or is employed by an industry for procurement of timber, forest land management, improved utilization of materials in manufacturing or other technical assignment.

This directory has been compiled by the Indiana Forestry and Woodland Owners Association, Inc. as a public service to assist persons seeking the services of a professional forester. Foresters listed paid a fee to be included, it does not include all the practicing professional foresters in the state of Indiana.

Markets are only one factor to consider when selling timber. The condition of the tree is the most important factor that determines when it is the right time to sell (is the tree increasing in value or declining – is the trees condition (health and vigor) going to decline, stay the same, or improve). Trees should be sold based on their problems or lack of potential rather than their current value. Ideally, you should sell your good trees when they have reached their peak or highest potential. Trees take carbon dioxide (CO₂) out of the air and produce oxygen in its place. They store the carbon in their roots, trunk, branches, and leaves. For each pound of new wood that grows, the tree removes 1.8 pounds of CO₂ from the air and produces 1.3 pounds of oxygen.

Select Trees Carefully

When a tree should be cut depends on many things, such as its age and maturity, its contribution to your woods' health, the market price of different timber species, and your own goals and needs. Make sure that your "select cut" is based on all these things and not just the current value of the tree.

Access and contract terms are important to timber value. There is often so much timber available for sale that buyers can be somewhat selective and some buyers may choose to avoid sales with tough terms or logging problems. A professional forester can provide a timber inventory which details factors such as total merchantable volume by diameter, by grade, and by species; current recommended harvest volumes; annual growth and yield; and woodland stocking levels. Owners can use the inventory for management planning, decision-making, and for appraisals assigning an estimated fair market value to standing timber.

Landowners have many forestry concerns: changes in land classification have increased property taxes; invasive species can have a high and persistent cost; there have been disease and insects that have claimed acres of forestland; and many landowners have seen losses to environmental factors including heavy storms, more droughts and climate change. A forester can look for economical approaches and help you work through these concerns. (Source: 2021 Indiana Consulting Foresters Stumpage Timber Price Report Spring 2022 Indiana Woodland Steward)

The condition of the tree is the most important factor that determines when it is the right time to sell a specific tree (what is the trees potential, is the tree increasing in value (what rate is it increasing) or declining? – is the trees condition (health and vigor) going to decline, stay the same, or improve?). Trees should be sold based on their problems or lack of potential rather than their current value. Ideally, you should sell your good trees when they have reached their peak or highest potential.

Harvest openings or regeneration cuttings (clear-cuts), which replicate natural disturbance, are a vital method to help reestablish oak and other sun-dependent species; this practice creates critical habitat for numerous wildlife species, including songbirds. Also, healthy, vigorous stands of timber ultimately result from these larger openings.

The INDIANA FORESTRY EDUCATIONAL FOUNDATION, Inc. (IFEF), is a non-profit whose mission is to educate the public and woodland owners on the importance of viable, sustainable working forest lands and good forest management practices.

IFEF supports forestry education by providing grants to partner organizations and sponsoring forestry programs across Indiana. These programs help landowners learn to apply forest management on their properties to improve forest health and other goals.

Opportunities for giving to support IFEF's mission include:

General Gifts – for projects as determined by its Board of Trustees.

Designated Gifts – donor directs how it is to be used

Bequests – leaving a gift to the Foundation by will.

Property Donations – IFEF accepts woodland properties for education demonstration and income.

IFEF Auction – the IFWOA annual meeting has a silent and live auction. Donations of auction items or bidding is encouraged and appreciated.

Please help IFEF by sending donations or inquiries to:

TYPES OF PROFESSIONAL FORESTERS

District Forester - Employed by the Indiana Department of Natural Resources, Division of Forestry to assist private forest landowners and industry in the proper management and utilization of Indiana's forestland resources. They administer the Classified Forest & Wildlands Program and promote other forestry incentive programs available to forest landowners in Indiana. The state's district foresters are not listed in this publication, it is a directory of private foresters. For further information about district foresters, write or call:

Indiana Division of Forestry
402 West Washington Street, Room W296
Indianapolis, IN 46204
317.232.4105
www.in.gov/dnr/forestry

Consulting Forester - A self-employed professional forester who offers management services to private forest landowners for a fee. A consultant is not an employee of the government nor of a wood-using industry, but works solely on behalf of the woodland owner's management objectives. Consultants are listed in this directory in the section called "Consulting Foresters Available" from page 2 to 42.

Industrial Forester - A professional forester who is also a licensed timber buyer and/or is employed by an industry for procurement of timber, forest land management, improved utilization of materials in manufacturing or other technical assignment. Those listed in this directory may provide management assistance to private forest landowners for a fee or other consideration. They are listed in this directory in the section called "Industrial Foresters Available" from page 43 to 56.

If you still have questions after reading about a forester's qualifications or affiliations, contact the forester and ask for references. References are normally provided upon request.

ADDITIONAL FORESTER CERTIFICATIONS

Association of Consulting Foresters (ACF) is the only national organization devoted solely to consulting foresters and the private landowners they serve. Since 1948,

Association of Consulting Foresters

THE GOLD STANDARD OF
FORESTRY CONSULTANTS

ACF has been dedicated to advancing the practice of professional consulting forestry, establishing and maintaining the highest ethical standards for its members, and promoting and encouraging stewardship of the forest resource.

Foresters in this directory with “ACF” after their name are independent business professionals who serve landowners by managing their forests and ethically marketing forest products on their behalf. Members of our association work directly with woodland owners and Indiana’s wood-using industries to harvest trees in a manner that sustains and strengthens our state’s beautiful forests. Services provided include:

- Forestry consulting
- Timber sales administration
- Timber inventories and appraisals
- Forest management plans
- Timber stand improvement
- Tree planting
- Invasive species management
- Controlled burning
- Wildlife management

Consulting foresters who belong to ACF must continually meet ACF’s strict standards for membership:

- Be a professional forester specializing in forestry consulting for the general public.
- Have earned at least a Bachelor’s degree with a major in forestry from an approved college or university.
- Have practiced professionally for at least five years.
- Successfully complete specific continuing education programs and continue to obtain credits.
- Comply with the ACF’s strict professional and ethical standards (code of ethics).
- Members may not have an economic interest in a timber purchasing or procurement entity.

You can visit the Indiana Chapter of the Association of Consulting Foresters at www.indiana-acf.org

ADDITIONAL FORESTER CERTIFICATIONS

Society of American Foresters (SAF) offers a voluntary credentialing program for forester certification. It assures the public that Certified Foresters have a degree from a professional forestry program, have a minimum of five year's experience, have passed a written proficiency examination, have shown the intent to participate in continuing forestry education, and ascribe to a uniform standard of professional practice and conduct. Foresters in this directory who are SAF Certified Foresters are shown with "SAF-CF" after their name. However, many not shown as being certified do meet the requirements for certification, but have chosen not to participate in the program.

The mission of the Society of American Foresters is to advance the science, education, technology and practice of forestry; to enhance the competency of its members; to establish standards of professional excellence; and to use the knowledge, skills and conservation ethic of the profession to ensure the continued health and use of forest ecosystems and the present and future availability of forest resources to benefit society. Contact national SAF at 866.897.8720, or online at www.eforester.org. For information on the Indiana Society of American Foresters, go online to www.indianasaf.org.

WHAT CAN A FORESTER DO FOR YOU?

Foresters are trained in a variety of disciplines and tasks to help you manage your woodland. These tasks include:

- Prepare a management plan based on your objectives and the potential of your woods
- Assist you with any of your woodland projects based on your plan
- Inspect woodlands prior to or after purchase
- Appraise the value of your timber for taxes, estate planning, or other needs
- Assist in locating or clarifying property lines
- Mark and complete timber stand improvement (TSI) to improve the quality of your woods
- Prevent and control invasive species to help ensure the future health of your woodland
- Plant trees or provide guidance on new plantings
- Estimate the costs of projects and help you obtain government cost-share funds
- Select and mark trees to be harvested according to Best Management Practices (BMPs)
- Advise you on the expected sales value of your timber, based on volume, species and quality, supply and demand, and timing of markets
- Advertise your timber for sale, accepting and evaluating bids, preparing a timber sale contract, and monitoring logging activities on your behalf
- Advise you or your accountant on investment cost and tax consequences associated with timber management or sales

WHY USE THE SERVICES OF A PRIVATE PROFESSIONAL FORESTER?

Eighty-three percent of Indiana's 4.8 million acres of forest lands are owned by over 200,000 private landholders like you. Indiana's forest resources are highly productive and if properly managed can substantially improve their productivity and the economic return to their owners.

Forest management can be an investment, while at the same time woodlands can also provide many other benefits: habitat for wildlife; watershed protection; providing aesthetically pleasing views; and recreation to landowners, families and friends.

Many landowners have neither the knowledge nor the time to undertake important forest management projects. Therefore, the need for professional foresters is evident.

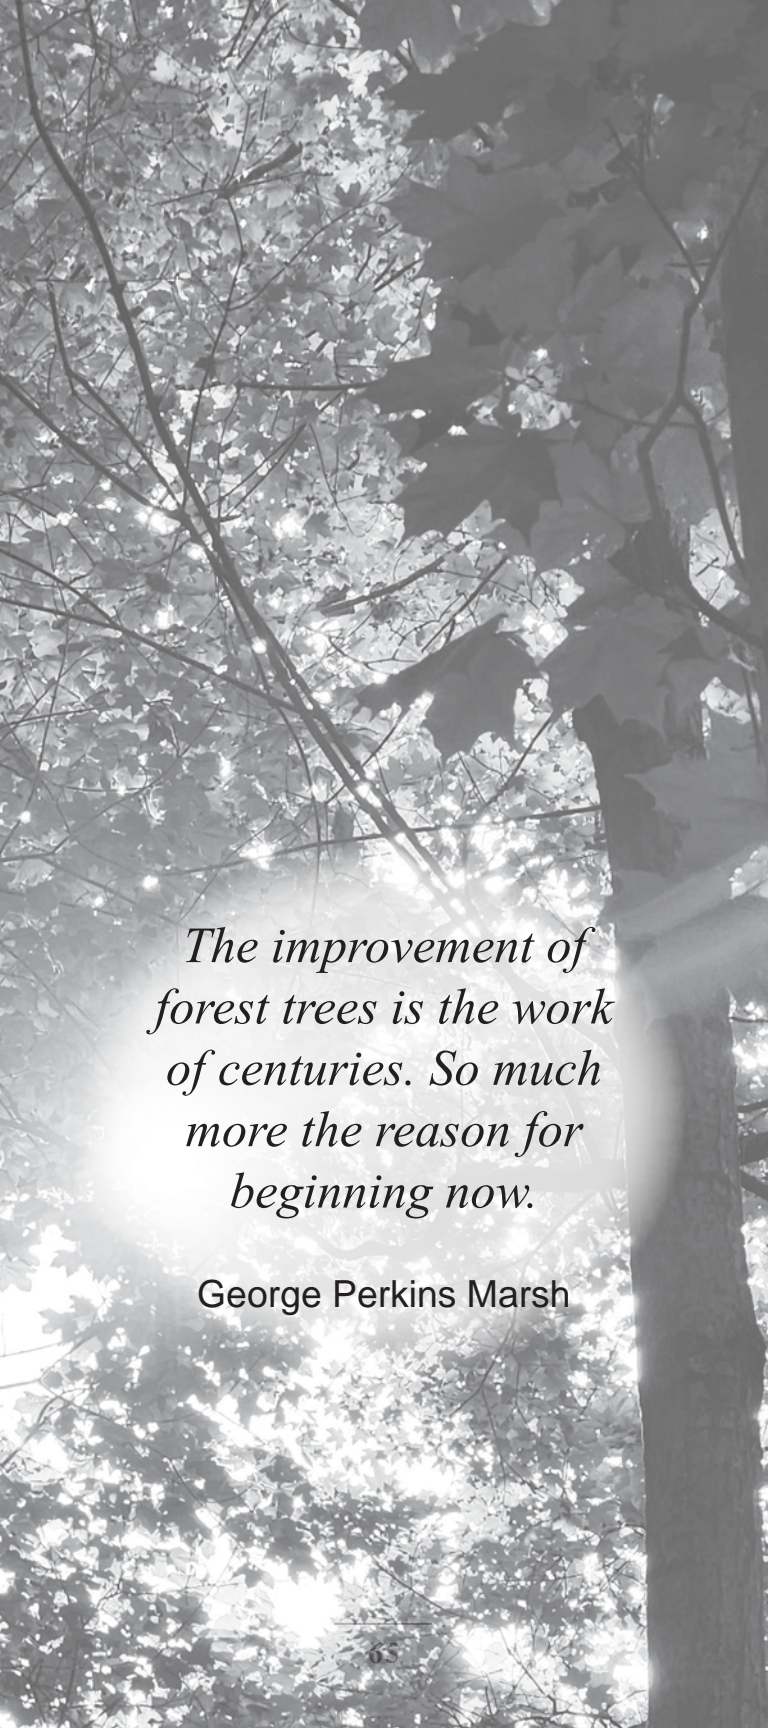

In managing a woodland, two considerations are of major importance: its biological limits and the owner's objectives. Those together will determine the productive potential of the woods and how and what management practices are applied. A professional forester has the skill and knowledge to assess your woodlands and develop an appropriate management plan.

According to the U.S.D.A. Forest Service Forest Inventory and Analysis (FIA) data, Indiana's net-growth-to-total-removals ratio is 2.3, meaning Indiana is growing 2.3 times more board feet than it is losing to mortality and removals.¹

As a woodland owner, you control a resource that is vital to Indiana's economic and social well-being. Indiana has a wood-using industry which employs more than 30,000 Hoosiers and contributes over $10 billion dollars in economic impact ($7 billion alone in value of shipments) to its economy annually. Private lands also support a robust hunting and recreation economy and provide a myriad of ecological benefits.

Please do your woodland, yourself and Indiana a big favor. Give a professional forester a chance to walk with you through your woods to evaluate its needs and potential. You may be pleasantly surprised.

ADDITIONAL WOODLAND OWNER RESOURCES

Classified Forest & Wildland Program: The Classified Forest and Wildlands Program encourages timber production, watershed protection, and wildlife habitat management on private lands in Indiana. Program landowners receive a property tax reduction in return for following a professionally written management plan. In addition to the tax incentive, landowners receive free technical assistance from DNR foresters and the ability to “green” certify their forests. The minimum requirement for program enrollment is 10 acres of forest, shrubland, and/or grassland. Wetlands have a 0.5 acre minimum. Contact your Division of Forestry district forester for enrollment at <https://www.in.gov/dnr/forestry/private-forestland-management>.

Ordering seedlings for conservation plantings: Contact a professional forester to assist with a tree planting plan, species mix, and planting assistance. Many private nurseries offer tree seedlings for conservation plantings, see www.rngr.net for a listing. Tree seedlings can be purchased from the state nursery for planting in Indiana only for conservation plantings. Conservation plantings include plantings for timber, windbreaks, wildlife food and habitat, watershed and soil protection, reclamation and education. Orders for the following spring may be placed after October 1. See www.in.gov/dnr/forestry/tree-seedling-nurseries/ for more information.

The Indiana Woodland Steward Newsletter: Three issues of the Woodland Steward are mailed to over 25,000 Indiana woodland owners each year. Each 16-page issue includes stories on forest management, timber prices, wildlife, invasive species, forest policy, and more. Archived past issues are available online.

Landowners are encouraged to sign up for this free newsletter (available via US Mail or email). Go to www.inwoodlands.org to sign up.

Invasive Species: The Indiana Invasive Species Council website has information on statewide invasive species issues. At www.entm.purdue.edu/iisc/ you can learn more about local invasive species events and conferences, resources, and how to report. Many counties have a local invasive species group to assist landowners with invasive species issues. Learn more about your county group at www.sicim.info/cismas.

DISCLAIMERS

This directory has been compiled by the Indiana Forestry and Woodland Owners Association, Inc. as a public service to assist persons seeking the services of a professional forester. It does not include all the practicing professional foresters in the state of Indiana.

Each person listed has paid a fee to help defray the cost of printing so that this publication may be distributed at no charge to the public. The Association gratefully acknowledges the support and encouragement of the Indiana Department of Natural Resources, Division of Forestry on this project.

Readers should understand that by making this information available, neither the Association nor the Division intend it to constitute an endorsement of any person named herein nor a warranty or opinion as to the quality of any professional service they may perform or offer to perform under any circumstances; nor do they accept any responsibility for the representations made by any persons listed herein.

A professional forester's fees are based upon many factors. Before you retain a professional forester's services, you should obtain a complete written explanation of the work to be done and the fee to be charged.

It is the intent of the Association to periodically review, update and republish the information contained in this directory.

This directory was funded in part by a grant from the USDA Forest Service.
