Authorized and paid for by the Chad Bennion Campaign.

Candidate Ronald Reagan ran against an incumbent President and held him accountable. In response, his opponent went negative. Reagan's reaction? "There you go again."

The Bennion Campaign warned that politicians who are held accountable may become desperate and engage in negative campaigning or whisper campaigns. Well, it's happened - to paraphrase President Reagan, "Senator, there you go again."

No previous opponent has held the incumbent Senator accountable for his voting record during his sixteen year tenure in the Utah State Legislature. The incumbent spent the first few years in the body representing his business interests*, and much of his legislative career ignoring yours.

Chad Bennion's campaign has been hard on the issues, while refraining from personal attacks. He has called out the incumbent for not serving the District well on the issues, while praising him as a nice man. The Senator's response? He initiates a whisper campaign, spreading false rumors and misrepresentations about Chad's personal life to divert attention from his own voting record." Don't believe this bunk and gunk!

Chad Bennion is a good man, a good father, and a good leader. Like we all do, he has overcome hardships. He has nothing to hide!

These despicable rumors and intentional misrepresentations are easily dispelled. Just ask yourself the following question: In any court in Utah, could a father gain full custody of his minor children after a contentious divorce if there were any issues or concerns regarding his conduct?

Now Senator, may we focus on the issues that affect the lives of people in our District?

A different kind of campaign.
A different type of Senator.
