Whatnots

By definition, the term Whatnots is used to refer to "an item or items that are not identified but are felt to have something in common with items already named."
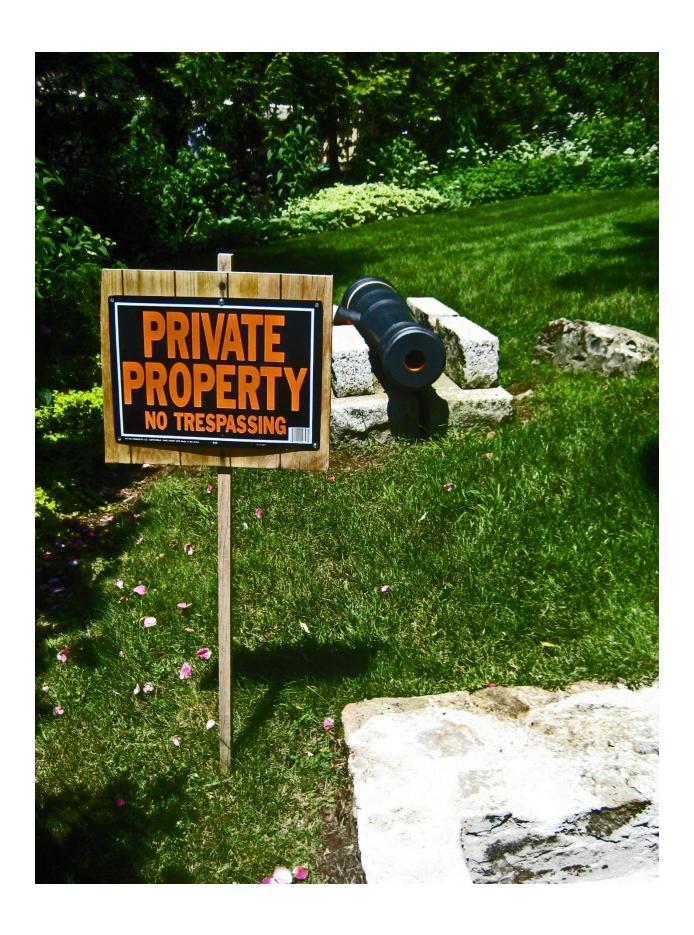

I've heard the term "whatnots' for as long as I can remember. I heard it just the other day by a mover telling his crew "this is the place for the stand, the equipment and whatnot."

Secular Token

The building with Christ on the Cross-is a charitable organization sponsored by a Christian Church. If Christ on the Cross-could be used on any building would there be more love reflected by the general public? Although, what do I mean by general public? And there's the rub.

There was a time when movie theaters were not just designed, but also took over grand ornate stage theaters with seating for 500 or even a thousand moviegoers. Today it's different.

Anthropocene

Boston, Massachusetts

I never heard of the word, "Anthropocene" until poet Randy Stark titled one of his books with the word. By definition Anthropocene means: "relating to or denoting the current geological age, viewed as the period during which human activity has been the dominant influence on climate and the environment."

Before the age of Anthropocene, there were nature lovers, earthy crunchy, tree huggers, land developers, loggers, mining companies, oil refineries, coal plants, trash barges, creators of exhaust fumes, makers of acid rain, and waste managers among other interested parties in our earthly surroundings.

The phone pictured here was in front of the 1947 Bell New England Telephone Headquarters building in the business district of Boston. The hollowed out pay telephone is gone since the photo was taken. Today, there are still a number of pay telephones available in the city.

Shoe In

Stand behind the yellow line when a train enters the station for your safety. If I stood on the yellow would that show anti-social behavior or risk taking? Or if I had one foot on the yellow line and one foot off, would that mean I'm too uncommitted? And if I ask someone else where would they stand, would that make me passive? Well, there is still time before the train comes to decide. There is a train, right? What day is it again?
