You told investigators that I bought you a Fitbit bc you're a fitness fanatic? That's not why I bought it. I bought it bc you were losing interest in school and became obsessed with fitness. I bought it to try to motivate you to connect comp sci to fitness to keep you focused. I thought it would be a good way for you interact with the intersection of the two and give you ideas as to how you can incorporate fitness into comp sci

And I never invited you over. You either asked if I had food bc there was none in your house or said you didn't want to or couldn't stay home and had no place to go.

R✓

And I didn't seduce you on my couch. Wtf you tell them?

R✓

She also printed the sexual assault thing at the very bottom. Almost as a footnote. Like..."oh, btw, this may have also happened, but it's not important enough to put higher up to delve into."

I really wish my sarcasm regarding the number of times I told investigators, which is not even accurate in the article, came through in writing. It wasn't a statement of fact, it was a sarcastic reply to their refusal to accept my answer.

And again with this shirtless pic of you. I never had one. You told me to look at your Fitbit page. I did. You had that pic as your profile pic. I nearly dropped my phone not expecting to see that and told Cruz, who was practically next to me, that you just had me look at an inappropriate pic of you. End of story. They

They got a hard on for this pic that never existed. And I'd love to know who told the investigators the I confided in them. This is ridiculous.

And I didn't tell the investigators that's why I bought you shoes. Dottin asked me if I bought them bc I thought you were poor and I said yeah, that's why. he told me to write that in the statement so I did.

R✓

How was I supposed to let you lose the only outlet you had for all the anger inside just because your mom threw away your shoes that had holes in them and you said you couldn't afford another pair. It was a financial burden to you and possibly a mental one, so I bought you shoes. I don't

And I didn't resign to keep me safe. I resigned to keep you safe and to give the then juniors a shot at having a real math teacher since antonini wasn't gonna replace me if I was still on her payroll.

And that letter was not intimate. I have so much regret in giving that to you before Cruz had a chance to read through it. I tried so hard to be gentle bc I knew your mental state was not great and it gets interpreted as intimate by people who had no idea what happened only 2 months before. Who had no idea the shit you pulled in my classroom during your junior year. Who were oblivious to your academic free fall so early into your senior year. Who ignored my concerns about that free fall, telling me that you're no longer my problem bc you're not my student.

I always asked you to let your mom know when you asked to come over. You were the one who had this need to keep things cloaked in secrecy. There was no need for secrecy bc there was nothing going on

R✓

And now everything I tried to hard to keep contained is out there. All the sacrifices I made to keep august out of the spotlight were made for nothing bc it's out there for all to see now. I left a profession I loved to protect your future and now bits and pieces of the story have been released and people are going to fill in the gaping

The generosity I showed you was not exclusive to you. It's the way I've always lived my life. But no one seems to be interested in my pattern of generosity, which is well documented over the past 14 years. My character is being publicly assassinated over a situation that is much less scandalous than it appears. But the truth wouldn't sell papers.
