VI. Old Business

- Vote on proposed Phi Mu bylaw exception
  - President: "Is there a motion to open the floor for discussion?"
  - ZTA moves to open floor.
  - ΑΔΠ seconds.
  - ZTA: "Our advisor has not heard back from headquarters, so we cannot vote today."
  - President: "Okay, so the vote will be out of 11 instead of 12."
  - ΣΚ: "Sigma Kappa cannot vote either."
  - President: "Okay, it will be out of 10 instead of 12. Do you need to check your phones for a minute or back a call? You guys can step out for a minute if you need to do that."
  - ΣΚ: "I've been waiting on her for a while."
  - ZTA: "Yeah, I sent an email last meeting, and I just got a text from my advisor saying we cannot vote because she has not heard back."
  - President: "That is alright. This has happened before. We just have to vote out of 10. Does anybody else have anything about this bylaw or anything they want to chat about?"
  - ΑΔΠ: "Something that we discussed with our executive board and our advisors, and I just kind of wanted to run this by everyone to make sure that this is what would in fact happen, is that if seniors were exempt from total, essentially the rest of the chapters would be losing 60-70 members in the spring due to graduation, so our numbers going into recruitment would be about 170 versus if theirs were exempt, then they would go in with a full chapter size, so wouldn't that in turn affect the numbers for total if they're going in with 237 members because they had extra seniors who weren't counted and then everyone else would have 170. If we all take the same number of members, then that's going to be 300 members versus what total needs to be."
  - President: "The math would be a little bit different. Phi Mu could also potentially hand out bids in the spring depending on their total as well. Phi Mu's anticipation with this is that they will also lose members, too, so it wouldn't be a perfect 237 but if they only take 10-12 seniors and they only lose 10-12 seniors, it would be higher than somebody who hits total correctly and is 60 seniors down."
  - Advisor: "I don't think they're intending to lose members but I think everybody has attrition from members transferring or experiences that are a little different, so, yeah that's something to consider."
  - ZTA: "I just heard from my advisor, and we can vote."
  - President: "Okay, so out of 11."
  - ΑΟΠ: "That being said, Phi Mu would be allowed to recruit over total in the fall? Next fall? More than like quota or more than we're typically allotted?"
  - President: "So because total is recalculated, then it wouldn't be that they were recruiting over it. So let's say we go in and Phi Mu goes into fall recruitment next year with like 230 and everybody else is closer to hovering around 200. When you recalculate total, it's not like they're 30 over everybody else and they're recruiting up to it, it's not like quota matching that some chapters do."
  - Advisor: "Recruitment number is based off of quota, and then right now we're talking about total, so very different figures. They would have the exact same quota as everybody else when they're participating in formal recruitment because it's a standard set for every chapter, and then some chapters have quota additions, which has nothing to do with this situation."
  - ΑΔΠ: "So going off of that, for clarification, if they did get whatever quota is for new member class, if Phi Mu has 230 members, or however many, when they get their new member class, wouldn't that skew the number for total so that more chapters have to COB because they'd be below?"
  - President: "It depends because right now we have chapters above 20 over total and we have chapters that are below total, so it would pull it up if they were above where most people are clustered, but it's not so mathematically drastic that it's going to pull it up by like 20. Is that what you're asking essentially?"

- AΔΠ: "Yeah, so if they have, like when you average the chapter sizes out, if they do have 20 or 30 more members, then that would pull the number up for total, wouldn't it?"
- Advisor: "Just like our chapters who are 20 or 30 below, or 20 or 30 above currently right now. We calculate total off of the number of women that you all have after recruitment. So we take that hard number and we add those up and divide by 12. Or 13!"
- President: "Actually us doing mean is more advantageous to chapters who cluster around that center than us doing median, which is what other schools tend to do. So it's not at the 50th percentile."
- Advisor: "Median is what is NPC's recommendation, and so we have held off on taking that recommendation to a vote from y'all because we don't know how Phi Mu is going to impact us, so we were waiting to see how that would impact our numbers, and I've been keeping a calculation of what total would be if we were at median and what total would be if we were at ACS, or average chapter size, so we will be making a vote on that, perhaps prior to next recruitment, but not anytime this semester, once we see how that goes. I doubt we would do it before recruitment because we're going to try to see how Phi Mu affects us first."
- President: "So thinking numerically, so like let's say Phi Mu gets 237 women, which is where total is right now. So 237 freshmen, sophomores, and juniors, and then they get 10-20 seniors, so let's say they're at 250. And then they graduate those seniors, and they're back down to 237. When they take that new member class, they would probably be...and most chapters would be around the 200 range prior to recruitment."
- Advisor: "We were at more the 160-170-180 range."
- President: "After they graduate their seniors?"
- Advisor: "That's how they came in this year."
- President: "So that would be the divide right there."
- Advisor: "I can tell you exactly what we came in at."
- XΩ: "When sororities are colonizing, do they usually recruit like a full chapter size anyway?"
- Advisor: "They try. That's the intention because they know that they will also have attrition, like everybody is, so they are trying to maintain that status, so they are going to try to recruit as many as you all set their expectation as."
- President: "And theoretically, if they don't have enough recruiters, they can pull from other schools for the formal recruitment process, which isn't ideal because you're not talking to a TCU Phi Mu."
- Advisor: "Our numbers coming into recruitment ranged from 125 to 186 with most in the 160s, 170s, 180s range."
- President: "So I hope that gives you an idea. Anybody else? Is there a motion to close the floor for discussion?"
- XΩ motions to close the floor.
- AXΩ seconds.
- President: "To recap...a yes means you approve the bylaw exception and seniors will not count towards total. A no means you do not approve the bylaw exception and seniors will count towards total."
- AXΩ – yes
- AΔΠ – no
- AOP – no
- XΩ – yes
- ΔΔΔ – yes
- ΔΓ – yes
- ΓΦΒ – yes

- KAΘ – yes
- KΚΓ – yes
- ΠΒΦ – yes
- ΣΚ does not vote.
- ZTA – yes
- President: “The motion passes. Seniors will not count towards total.”
