

Clara Creed

Tell us what you value, stand for, and/or passionate about.

I'm passionate about becoming a pediatric speech therapist because I believe every child deserves the chance to communicate and be understood. My interest in communication sciences began in high school when I took an American Sign Language class. It opened my eyes to the many ways people express themselves and sparked a deep interest in helping others find their voice. I value patience, empathy, and inclusion, and I'm committed to a future where I can use those values to make a difference.

What are you looking to gain from your college experience at TCU?

At TCU, I hope to grow into the best version of myself—academically and personally. I want to challenge myself in the classroom, develop a strong foundation in communication sciences, and gain the confidence and skills I'll need to make a real difference in people's lives. Just as importantly, I'm looking forward to building lifelong friendships and being part of a community that values support, spirit, and personal growth. I believe TCU is the kind of place that will inspire me every day to keep learning and growing.

What are you looking to gain from your college experience at TCU?
At TCU, I am seeking a well-rounded education that not only prepares me academically, but also helps me grow as a person. I hope to graduate with strong personal values and the ability to positively impact the world—whether through my future career, community service, or simply in the way I choose to live my life. A major part of this journey involves building lifelong friendships and meaningful connections. I hope to find friends who share my values and interests, and who will challenge me to grow, step outside my comfort zone, and try new things. I believe that joining a Panhellenic sorority will provide me with that community and give me a place where I can support others and be supported, while becoming the best version of myself.

HI! I'M JOSIE MAR

Which three qualities do you look for in a friend and which three qualities would your friends list to describe you?

In a friend, I value honesty, loyalty, and determination. These qualities are essential not only in building genuine friendships, but also in living a meaningful life. Of these, honesty is the most important to me. While it can sometimes be difficult to hear, honesty builds trust and allows relationships to grow stronger. It also encourages self-improvement by helping us recognize where we can grow. My friends would describe me as funny, caring, and resilient. I love lightening the mood with a quick joke and making sure everyone feels comfortable and included in group settings. I'm someone who always pushes myself to reach my goals, no matter the challenges I face along the way.

DREW DOWDY !!!

What are you looking to gain from your experience at TCU and in a Panhellenic Sorority

During my time at TCU, I am looking to gain a well-rounded education from my college experience. Not just academically, but personally and socially as well. I hope to build lifelong friends, develop leadership skills, and participate in community service.

What three qualities do you look for in a friend and what three qualities your friends list to describe you

Driven, kind, and fun-loving are the three most important qualities I look for in a friend! I love being around friends who share similar values as me and push me to be the best version of myself. My friends would describe me as sweet, loyal, and vibrant.

KATE SHAW

Which three qualities do you look for in a friend and which three qualities would your friends list to describe you?

In a friend, I look for someone who is loyal, honest, and positive. I think it is very important to have a friend you can always trust. My friends would describe me as enthusiastic, reliable, and outgoing. I always remain positive and work hard to succeed on projects I am involved in.

What are you looking to gain from your college experience at TCU?

During my time at TCU, I am hoping to gain a deeper understanding of not only myself but the world around me. I want to develop new skills in relation to my major and future career as well as meet many new people and participate in various activities on campus.

Lila Wojcik

Tell us what you value, stand for, and/or are passionate about

I've always been passionate about people: connecting with them, supporting them, and learning from them. I truly believe in showing up for others, and I try to lead with kindness and compassion in everything I do. I find the most joy when I'm helping others feel supported and I'm passionate about being part of something bigger than myself. That's what draws me to sorority life—the opportunity to join a community of women that not only look out for each other but inspire each other to grow.

What are you looking to gain from your college experience at TCU?

I have always valued opportunities where I can make a difference and grow as a leader and I know TCU will give me so many chances to do that. I'm excited to meet new people and see what connections I'll make along the way. Even though four years will go by fast, I know I'll be surrounded by strong, supportive women who will be a part of my life long after college. I hope this next chapter of my life pushes me to become the best version of myself!

Mallory Gallerano

Tell us what you value, stand for, and or are passionate about.

What I value most is loving and caring for others in a way that helps them see the value in themselves. I believe that every person deserves to feel seen, heard, and worthy—and sometimes, all it takes is someone else believing in you to start believing in yourself. I'm passionate about building people up, helping them recognize their own strengths, and encouraging them to have the kind of confidence that doesn't just stay with them, but spreads to others as well. This belief in the power of encouragement and emotional connection is what inspires me to pursue a career in psychology. I want to become a child psychologist so I can work with young people during some of the most formative and vulnerable years of their lives. My goal is to create a safe space for them to express themselves, process their emotions, and most importantly, begin to understand their worth. I want to be the kind of person who helps children not only heal, but grow into confident individuals who know they matter—and who can, in turn, help others feel the same.

What three qualities do you look for in a friend, and what three qualities would your friends list to describe you?

When I think about the kind of friends I value most, three qualities stand out: kindness, trustworthiness, and ambition. I'm drawn to people who are kind and upbeat—those who genuinely care about others, bring positive energy into a room, and treat people with compassion. Trust is also everything to me. I need to know that I can count on someone to be honest, supportive, and respectful of what I share with them. Lastly, I really admire ambition. I'm inspired by people who have goals, push themselves to grow, and encourage others to do the same.

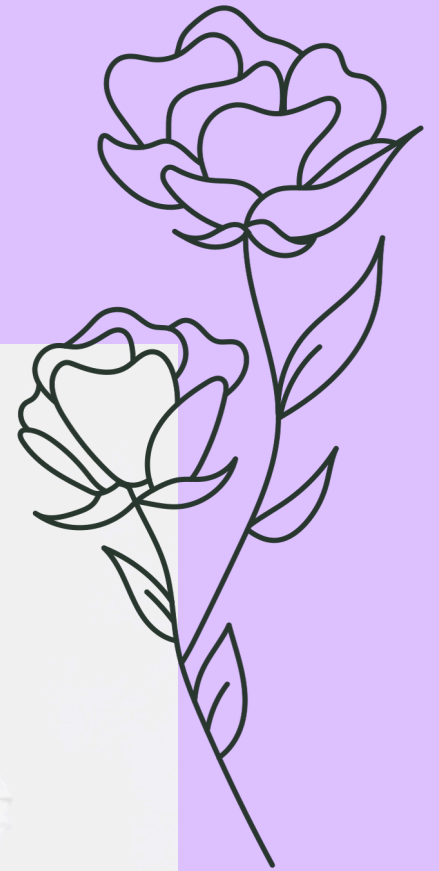

As for the qualities I hope my friends would use to describe me, I would want them to say I'm loving, courageous, and funny. Being described as loving means the most to me because it reflects how much I care about others—I try to make sure the people around me feel supported, valued, and never alone. Courage is something I strive for daily. I want to be seen as someone who is willing to face challenges, stand up for what's right, and lead with my heart, even when it's difficult. And finally, I'd love for people to see me as funny—not just because I enjoy making others laugh, but because humor is such a powerful way to connect, bring joy, and lift others up, even during hard times.

Riley Hannaman

1) What are you looking to gain from your experience at TCU and in a Panhellenic sorority? I am eager to immerse myself in everything TCU has to offer and actively contribute to the Horned Frog community. My goal is to gain an exceptional education and meaningful experiences that will shape my future career while also embracing the friendships and personal growth that come with college life. While academics are my top priority, I am incredibly excited about the opportunity to build lifelong connections through a Panhellenic sorority. I truly believe that sisterhood fosters a supportive, uplifting environment where friendships are built on loyalty, encouragement, and shared experiences. I am looking for a sorority that embodies these values—a group of strong, compassionate women who inspire one another and create a sense of belonging. With an open mind and enthusiasm, I am ready to embrace the recruitment process and all the incredible moments it has to offer!

2) Which three qualities do you look for in a friend and which three qualities would your friends list to describe you? The three most important qualities I look for in a friend are compassion, trustworthiness, and positivity. I value compassion because true friendships are built on unwavering support and being there for one another through every high and low. Trust is equally essential—I want friends who always have my back, just as I will have theirs. Lastly, positivity is important to me because I believe in embracing life with optimism, and I want to surround myself with people who uplift and inspire those around them. My friends would describe me as selfless, understanding, and cheerful. I strive to put others before myself, offering unwavering support whenever they need it. I also make it a priority to listen with an open heart and genuinely understand different perspectives. Above all, I aim to be the kind of friend I seek—one who brings encouragement, kindness, and joy into the lives of those around me.

Sophia Quagliata

Tell us what you value, stand for, and or/are passionate about.

I value and am passionate about being kind to everyone! You never know what is going on in someone's personal life and an act of kindness could make their day. It's important to be the light and kindness in someone else's day because everyone has their own battles.

Which three qualities do you look for in a friend and which three qualities would your friends list to describe you?

In a friend, I look for someone who is intentional, trustworthy, and caring. I believe my friends would describe me as bubbly, kind, and loyal.

