

Rest for the Weary

Patristic Universalism
Biblically Based Theology

"Come to me, all you who are weary and burdened,
and I will give you rest."
Matthew 11:28

Dear VIP Members and Friends,

Meet Rev. Lucas Keppel

A Presbyterian pastor and author exploring Christian Universalism.

Visit his website that accompanies his upcoming book, Truly Good News, and gathers together videos and writings about grace, reconciliation, and the love that holds the world together.

"My work grows from the Reformed tradition, and from the conviction that God's love truly includes everyone."

▪ Rev Levy Keppel

Reforming toward hope: Why universalism belongs in the Reformed tradition

by Lucus Levy Keppel

Published: January 7, 2026

I approached the mic at the presbytery meeting with some trepidation. I am not shy about speaking in public, nor about sharing my beliefs — but it’s always nerve-wracking to answer questions about your faith statement and journey (a requirement for pastors who move and switch presbyteries).

A peer asked: “In your statement of faith, you say, ‘Through Jesus’ sacrifice, all the sins of the world are and will be forgiven, even of those who claim to be unbelievers.’ Do you consider yourself a universalist, then?”

My heart pounding, I replied simply: “Yes.” And stepped back from the mic.

Fortunately, after that, the laughter of the group buoyed my spirits. I went on to explain that I’m a “Reformed universalist” – valuing John Calvin, Karl Barth and Shirley Guthrie Jr. as well as exploring the works of Ilaria Ramelli, David Bentley Hart, and Al Kimel. Christian universalism, as I use the term, is the conviction that God’s redeeming work in Christ will ultimately reconcile all people to God. Though universalism appears in many Christian streams of thought, my focus here is its deep compatibility with the Reformed tradition. My universalist understanding is not a departure from the Reformed faith — but a faithful unfolding of it. Read More

More Articles on the Website

Leaving the Matrix the Story of Pastor Jay Bakker \(son of Jim and Tammy Fae Bakker\)

Do Pets and Animals go to Heaven?

The Funeral: The Moment Theology Matters

Is Human Will More Powerful than God?

©2026 Patristic Universalism | www.patristicuniversalism.com

Web Version

Forward

Unsubscribe

Powered by
GoDaddy Email Marketing ®