Sunday Reflection

The Gospel in this Easter Sunday is taken from John 20:1-9. The biblical idea of resurrection is in no way comparable with the Greek idea of immortality. In the Greek concept, the soul of a person which is incorruptible by nature enters into divine immortality after death has severed ties. The scripture view it differently. The body corrupts in the tomb, but this will no more than a transitory state, it will be reunited with the soul just like Christ Jesus resurrection, "the first born from among dead" (1Cor. 15:20). The passion, death and resurrection of Jesus offers a solution to the problem of salvation and immortal life.

Today's gospel of John says: "Then the other disciple who had reached the tomb first also went in; he saw and he believed" (John 20:8). What was it that the disciple saw and what was it about what he saw that led him in contrast to Peter, about whose faith nothing is said – to believe? It was the placing apart of the linen "cloth and the cloth that had been over his head" (Jn, 20:7). This reminds us of the raising of Lazarus (Jn. 11:43-44). Lazarus was completely passive in his return to life, totally reliant upon the command of Jesus and needing others to remove the cloth that covers his face and body. Whereas, Jesus has actively raised Himself in a majestic re-assumption of life. Jesus is a "sign" of the defeat of death, a divine reclaiming of life.

Happy Easter!
