

NINE BIBLICAL DECLARATIONS FOR SELF-WORTH

What we say to ourselves and about ourselves has a huge impact on what we think of ourselves. It also has a huge impact on how we think God sees us. If we think less of ourselves, we are thinking less of who God created us to be, which gives Him less glory than He deserves. The Holy spirit has driven me to compile this list of nine bible-based declarations for you to say to yourself. Everything about who and how God has created you to be has a purpose, and it is divinely permitted for you to stand in agreement with it. Let's jump into it.

God created me in the image of His likeness (Genesis 1:27). How great is it to know that God replicated His existence into you? Naturally, your father was a carrier of your genetic coding, but, spiritually, you are nothing short of an heir and offspring of our Almighty God. Your creation goes beyond the natural, and what is beyond the natural is beyond natural perception.

God loves me so much that He hears me in the middle of over seven billion people crying out to Him (Exodus 3:7). You are one of seven billion people praying, worshipping, rejoicing, and crying out to God, and He still hears you. You are still worth His time, presence, and patience.

My mistakes did not cancel God's plans for my life (Psalms 103:12). Your mistakes may have delayed you, but they did not deny you. He has the final say over your qualification for His calling.

God knew me before He created me in the womb, before He breathed life into me, and before the world took my identity (Jeremiah 1:5). Your identity belongs to God, not to the world. You are who God says you are.

God has given me an abundance of everything that I need (Matthew 25:29). We serve a God of unlimited power. Everything that describes Him – abounding, everlasting, overflowing, running over, etc. – declares Him as a God of excess. And, He loves you so much that He has given you access to the excess.

God supplies all my needs while filling me with joy (John 16:24). We serve a God Who gives out sustenance and joy simultaneously. In Him, needs are supplies while joy is granted.

God loves me enough to make His power perfect in my weakness. The more I acknowledge my weakness, the more God's power manifests in me (2 Corinthians 12:9). God loves you so much that He gains strength in the areas of your weakness to be an even greater Source of dominion over you.

I am no longer burdened by the yoke of slavery (Galatians 5:1). Through Christ, you are free from everything you come from and available to everything that God has for you.

God wants all my worries, cares, and anxieties (1 Peter 5:7). God loves you so much that He gets upset and jealous when you take your concerns to someone besides Him. The world does not always have time to listen, but God does.

We serve an amazing God who also made you amazing. You are worthy of everything that God has called you to. It is my prayer that – with His help and the hand of Christ – you will receive all that He has declared over you, your family, and your future. It is my prayer that you will grow to recognize and remember your worth, while bowing before the God Who granted it to you. We are more than conquerors, and we can do all things through Christ who strengthens us.
