

Wish

You were once alive, breathing deep, wrong against the right
Standing tall, could see the fall, deep within your eyes

You were lost
Never could you hide
From the pain inside
You would say, "I'm o.k."

Oh...Wishing you weren't gone again
Oh...Wishing you were home instead

Stories yet unfold, leaving you impudent, restless soul
The hand that gave, the final wave, could it have been yours

You were lost
Never would you hide
From the pain inside
You would say, "I'm still o.k."

Oh...Wishing you weren't gone again
Oh...Wishing you were home instead

Life without reason, devotion or treason
Emotions and lust laced in sin
A life taken too soon, defunct or in bloom
Tomorrow will hold you again, oh again

You were lost...Now you're found...

Oh...Wishing you weren't gone again
Oh...Wishing you were home instead