

monument: Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks. Looks pretty, but what is there to do? Here's what we found out: The four units of the nearly 500,000-acre preserve ring Las Cru-the bearded lifestyle—scissors, beard oil, stubble the fine tufted folk at Beardbrand. There's ing decals, suspenders, even a T-shirt with inch against, of course). The only surprise is that the not, say, Portland. beardbrand.com.

FOR GREATNESS

TR
we
no
First i
ping v
cockt cedar Fog, c
rant i
make cedar
Timbe
Beer,
its wa
farmer
produ
cedar
bitter spotted (Smol
and c
Camp
(Woo
What
redwo
ice cu

PAPER CHASE

Maybe it's penance for what Lisa Occhipinti has proposed doing with books in the past—carving them into interesting shapes, making mobiles out of them, pretty much anything besides reading them—but the first three-quarters of her latest book, Novel Living (Abrams, 2014; $25), is devoted to preserving, restoring, and displaying the printed page instead of relegating it to arts-and-crafts period. It's only in the final chapter that the artist, based in Venice, California, gets out the scissors again. And we have to admit, she's got some good ideas there, especially this one (left). Okay, Lisa, all is forgiven.

