

Medieval chamber pots & nuisance regs.

Nuisance law dates back to the Middle Ages. The most common complaint about neighbors? The contents of chamber pots dumped out windows.

Half the problem was solved in 1891 with indoor plumbing, and the other half in 1908, when zoning was invented. With zoning, people stopped complaining.

Now, the Zoning & Regulatory Subcommittee has advanced a short-term transient rental policy that goes back to nuisance laws. It takes away your residential zoning and gives you a complaint line.
