

Barnstable draws the line at beagles.

This “doghouse” in Cottonwood, Idaho is one of many weird Airbnbs. You can also sleep in a crypt, and 18 different shipping containers.

The short-term rental policy Barnstable’s Zoning & Regulatory Committee sent the Town Council says groups of vacationers must rent actual, legal dwellings only. Phew! But after that, anything goes: all villages and all neighborhoods will be like seasonal cottage colonies, with transient vacationers, coming and going in (formerly) residential districts.

Could be worse. Could be Idaho.

Get involved or get used to it.

