

Install a solar farm, sell green energy back to the grid. Hey, it's your yard.

The trick is a solar photovoltaic array installation big enough to generate at least 1 million kilowatts of power annually. Would it be a “commercial business?” Will neighbors object to the noise and glare? Yeah. So.

Barnstable keeps advancing a proposal that says absentee real estate investors can operate mini-lodging companies with two short-term transient rental “homes,” open for business 365 days-a-year, in your residential district.

But they're going to shut down your yard? C'mon.

Get involved or get used to it.
