Subject: Declaration of the State of Loc Nation GPBC's Sovereignty, Self-Determination, and Restitution Justice Status

Executive Summary

This document serves as a formal international and national declaration by the State of Loc Nation Global Public Benefit Corporation (and its affiliates), affirming its self-determined sovereign political status, entitlement to self-determination, and its full right to restitution justice for Afro-descended peoples across the United States and the global diaspora. This declaration is not a request for permission, but a lawful assertion of standing, rights, and obligations based on historic, legal, and moral foundations recognized by the international community.

Legal and Historical Basis

1. United Nations Recognition

The 2016 UN Working Group report affirmed that African Americans constitute a distinct people, subjected to systemic oppression, and entitled to self-determination and reparations.

2. African Union Declaration (2003)

The AU formally recognized the African Diaspora, including Black Americans and Afro-Caribbeans, as the Sixth Region of Africa, with political, cultural, and sovereign rights.

3. CARICOM Reparations Framework

The CARICOM Reparations Commission confirmed that Afro-descendants are victims of crimes against humanity, and are entitled to full land restitution, reparations, and sovereign reintegration.

4. Historical Black Sovereign States

The formation of Haiti (1804) and Liberia (1822) serve as legally valid precedents of Afro-descended sovereignty and the right to migrate, settle, and govern independently.

5. U.S. Civil Rights and Freedmen's Precedent

- The Freedmen's Bureau Act of 1865 acknowledged African Americans as a distinct post-emancipation population with rights to land, education, and political protection—functioning as a temporary sovereign authority.

- The Civil Rights Acts of 1866 and 1964, along with the 14th and 15th Amendments, created a federal mandate for full legal personhood and equal protection for formerly enslaved persons.
- These laws form part of the domestic constitutional basis for restitution, special protection, and sovereign redress.
