EYITEMI TAIRE

Brand Strategist & Real Estate Consultant

Her first career was in brand marketing, working with international fast-moving consumer goods companies such as British American Tobacco, Airtel & Coca-Cola International. She was recruited by Unilever UK in 1996 to be a trainee in Nigerian Breweries Plc, where she developed a passion for brand marketing. She has extensive experience in Nigeria, as well as across Africa and the Middle East, having worked with Heineken International, based in Amsterdam but serving the AME region. She ended that phase of her career in Diageo, working as Customer Marketing Director and later Portfolio Director. Her experience cuts across managing individual brands, portfolios and teams to managing markets and global projects. She is equally well versed in developing strategy, planning and implementation.

She left that world behind in 2016 to run her own real estate consultancy. She initially provided luxury short-let accommodation and then evolved into servicing clients who wish to purchase or sell real estate assets, execute joint ventures, large scale brokerage in the Alaro City and Lakowe Lakes projects, as well as several interesting large transactions.

In her spare time since 2016, Eyitemi has worked as the Course Director for Professional Development Programmes for the Advertising Practitioners Council of Nigeria (APCON) and she has formed a team with a renowned Art Historian and art dealers to revive the legacy of the Nigerian master sculptor, Ben Osawe. She has also been the MD of FIIRO Consult (Federal Institute of Industry Research under the Ministry of Science and Technology). She also worked in the Labour Party campaign for the presidential elections in 2023.
