

The Birth of LoveSense

When Love and Sense met, there was a spark of recognition. I feel as though I already know you. I can't remember when I didn't know you. I feel so good with you. Love found Sense sensible, logical, rational, and objective. And Sense found Love amorous, emotional, intuitive, and insightful. Together, Love and Sense felt whole, happy, connected, and complete.

Like a scientist in search of physical truth, Sense followed its head. For Sense, to be was to know. Like a poet in search of emotional truth, Love followed its heart. For Love, to be was to feel. Sense wanted Love, and Love desired Sense. And as their togetherness grew, it became not just a flutter of the heart or an intellectual grasping of the mind but an honoring and synthesis of both. The sum of the parts heart and mind combined to form a greater whole. And in this sacred place where

"felt-thought" and "logical-experience" met and merged,

LoveSense was born.
