Consent. for Treatment of Minors

Washington State law recognizes the rights of 13 to 17-year old to consent to their own mental health treatment which also protects their right to confidentiality. I believe it is important to work with the family while preserving the adolescent's right to confidentiality. Treatment efforts may be impeded if an adolescent does not feel s/he has protected space to discuss concerns. As such, I typically seek the adolescent's consent before speaking with parents about matters discussed in therapy. With this said, the same limits to confidentiality that apply to adults also apply to minors. If a minor (13-17-year-old) is seeking treatment, please sign below regarding consent to treatment as described in Erin Jacobson Office Policy Statement.
