

December 5, 2015

Dear Parents;

The State Department of Education requires me to inform you that:

During naptime the children are permitted to be napping in the room without my constant presence. I remain in the playroom as long as someone is awake. If everyone has fallen asleep, I may leave the room and go upstairs to clean up and prepare for snack time. During that time I will use a Visual and sound monitoring system. I will do a physical check as necessary. Infants and children under the age of two require a physical check every 15 minutes.

An overview of TV time

Children are permitted to watch interactive technology that tie in with our curriculum. The Preschool Prep Company has an award winning set of CD's including Letters, Letter sounds, Shapes, Numbers, Colors, Digraphs, Blends, Sight words 1, 2 and 3. I chose this set because it aides in teaching a variety of ages and developmental levels that this daycare focuses on. TV time only occurs at 11:00 am while I am making their lunch and not every day.

They may also watch a quick you tube presentation with music that is tied in with their curriculum. Some of their favorites are "phonics 2" and "The Circle Song". "Miss Rachel" "Daddy Go"

Passive technology or non-interactive technology is limited to 30 minutes a week. An example of this might be a quick you tube video that shows something that they are interested in. An example of that would be a quick video of a dolphin laughing. We were reading a book about sea creatures and the discussion came to a question: "how does a dolphin laugh"? Apparently they do. Another example is real animal sounds. Looking up these ideas come directly from the kids own curiosity.

The children do not and never have watched anything not intended for children or shows with commercials that contain soft drink, other sugar drinks, and advertisements with fast food or media with brand placement.

Lisa Froble

---

Parents name

signature and date