

Torpedopot Newsletter

The Lord will send a blessing on your barns and on everything you put your hand too. The Lord your God will bless you in the land. - Deuteronomy 28:8

“To forget how to dig the earth and tend the soil is to forget ourselves.”

M. K. Gandhi

Life is not static. The rising of the sun each morning can represent a new beginning and a new way of living. The COVID-19 virus has forced the entire world to change. We have had to physically distance, wear face masks, work from home or find other sources of income. We have been unable to care for our sick loved ones or bury those who have succumbed to this awful disease as we are accustomed.

However, with change comes opportunities -- to rest, meditate, eat better, exercise, read and connect with friends and family. What is for sure is that the next 10 years are not going to be like the last 10 years. The food industry can change as well.

The Future of Agriculture Production

In direct response to the COVID-19 crisis, Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Russell C. Redding stated that “there is an increased demand for locally grown food.” Redding also encouraged Pennsylvanians to start victory gardens. Now that’s a blast from the past! Victory gardens or war gardens were planted during WWI and WWII. Vacant lots, backyards, roof tops and other available spaces were converted into food gardens in the United States. The public is encouraged to plant gardens again.

What could be more local than harvesting food from your own backyard? What could be fresher than walking outside and picking your own tomatoes, radishes, lettuce, greens, or squash and preparing them right at home?

If you’re thinking that gardening is hard, time consuming and expensive, well think again. Darral Addison, founder and CEO of the Torpedopot™, has created a simple and easy way to produce fresh vegetables for you and your family. Just put organic soil, along with seeds or plants, into a time released, self-watering pot. Connect your pot to a hose or other water supply, and there is nothing left for you to do. Like the song says, just sit back and “let the sunshine in.” Before you know it, it will be harvest time. It is a fun and productive way to return to your roots and strive for self-sufficiency.

The good folks at Torpedopot™ have made it easy for you. Let's embrace the change. Learn more at torpedopot.com.

Joe Harrison

W.B. Saul H.S. of Agricultural Sciences ('78)
BS Agri-Business Education, Tuskegee University ('82)
MEd Extension Education, Pennsylvania State University ('86)

Copyright © 2020 Torpedopot™ - All Rights Reserved

“When you do the common things in an uncommon way, you will command the attention of the world”

George Washington Carver