Americanism

June

June is upon us as we countdown to the Nation's 250th birthday. This month has many significant dates that come to mind.

First among them is June 14th. On this day, France declared her independence by storming the Bastille which began the French Revolution (Bastille Day).

Our nation also commemorates this day as the adoption of the American Flag by the second Continental Congress (Flag Day). We recognize our nation by honoring our flag and displaying this national symbol by pledging loyalty to our country.

As a reminder to all of us, there are a few codes of conduct that need to be observed regarding the nations flag (essentially manners) that all patriotic Americans should adhere to.

Do:

- Display the flag from sunrise to sunset only, unless lite at night
- Fly the United States flag above all others
- Always allow the flag to fly freely

Don't:

- Let the flag touch the ground
- Carry the flag flat or put items in the flag
- Store the flag where it can become dirty

- Walk in front of the flag

June 19th recognizes the Emancipation of enslaved African Americans as of 1865 when Union troops marched into Galveston, Texas, to announce the end of the Civil War.

June 20th is when we observe the Summer Solstices (the longest day of the year in the Northern Hemisphere).

And last but not least is June 21st, Father's Day. The third Sunday of the month is the day we set aside to honor the fathers in our lives.

Let me leave you with this June quote to ponder:

"Nothing can now be believed which is seen in the newspapers, truth itself becomes suspicious by being put into that polluted vehicle".

Thomas Jefferson to John Novell, June 11, 1807
